One Hundred Years of Teacher Education

Since the founding of Illinois State Normal University in 1857, many hundreds of freshmen have enrolled and in four years have left the school to enter the teaching profession. From its beginning ISNU has been a college solely for the education of teachers. From its initial day ISNU has also been an institution where friendships are begun and continued. Four years spent at this school for the past one-hundred years have meant an intermingling of ideas which arose from both classroom and social activity.

The chief aim of this Centennial Index is not only to recall to you this past year but also to acquaint you with the past century and to give you a glimpse into the future. The object, in short, is to show you the growth of ISNU with the many modifications and traditions which are inherent in her program.

During the past year we have observed you in all activities so that we could get a picture of life on campus as it is today. However, we could only print the pictures and record the incidents; now it is up to you who are the integral part of the functioning of ISNU to fill in the details.

Thus, the yearbook staff presents to you the Centennial Index for you to evaluate the heritage of the past, to remember the highlights of this year, and to glance into the second century.

THE SECOND CENTURY 240

The First Century

YESTERDAY, today,

Memories by the score have been willed to posterity in the past sixty-six issues of the yearbook publication.

With the dawning of the Illinois State Normal University Centennial Year, there arises a desire to review the events and interests leading up to the establishment and perpetuation of the school.

This abridged historical synopsis in no way attempts to relate a complete picture of the legislative acts, biographical sketches, or presidential policies cementing ISNU's foundation. Rather, the significant purpose of the forthcoming section is to grant a brief but gratifying glimpse into the term of each administrator, flavored with the university's advancements and modes of philosophical thinking during his term.

With full realization that ISNU is not the product of any one person's endeavor, ideals, or achievements, it is only proper to dedicate this story to the exponents of teacher education and especially to those persons whose names will never appear in the annals of education's history.

The writer gratefully acknowledges the contributions of the following: Dr. Gertrude Hall, ISNU Director of Publicity; Mr. Nelson R. Smith, University Photographer; Mr. William White, University Press; Mr. Russell Steele, Assistant in Publicity; Dr. Helen M. Cavanagh, ISNU Professor of History; Dr. Henry Holmes Smith; Mr. Harold Pratt; Miss Dorothy Dean Davis; Miss Frances Ridgley; Dr. Richard Browne; and Mr. Owen Marsh.

Many useful aids were located at these places: Chicago Public Library; Springfield Historical Library; McLean County Historical Society; Milner Library, ISNU; and The Daily Pantagraph.

In addition, profitable information was gleaned from these resources: American Colleges and Universities; Dictionary of American Biography; John H. Burnham, History of Bloomington-Normal in McLean County, Illinois; John W. Cook, The Semi-Centennial History of ISNU; John H. and tomorrow . . .

"We walked, the morning sun beneath,
Glad wand'ring side by side
Our hopes entwined, a pleasant wreath
Bright friendship's smile our guide.
With heart and hand united sped
United still in heart,
We now toward separate pathways led,
Perchance forever part."

With this hymn the newly established Illinois Normal University, North Bloomington, Illinois, concluded its first commencement program on a warm June afternoon in 1860. Amidst a throng of educators, dignitaries, and townspeople, ten three-year graduates received diplomas from Samuel Moulton, President of the Board.

The establishment of the Illinois Normal University marked the crowning achievement of an expansive decade in American education. Actual work on the project began in 1834 when Illinois Senator William H. Gatewood introduced to the state legislature a plan for county teacher seminaries. The bill was vetoed.

Along with the adoption of legislation for free common schools, the 1855 General Assembly created the office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction. In that same year, Charles E. Hovey was elected president of the State Teachers Institute and editor of its official organ, "The Illinois Teacher."

Two factors, however, hampered rapid progress of the normal idea. Advocates of an Agricultural University would not compromise with those desiring industrial and normal education in the proposed school. Both factions built their hopes on partaking of the special seminary funds and federal land grants set aside for extending formal learning.

On February 18, 1857, Governor William H. Bissell signed a bill creating the Illinois Normal University; the bill also provided for a fifteen-member State Board of Education and generous endowments from the college and seminary funds. The institute was named "Normal University" instead of "Normal College" in order to utilize the seminary funds set aside specifically for universities; also, it was the original plan to add other departments to the school.

Jesse E. Fell was the outstanding crusader in the fight to situate the normal school in Bloomington, the heart of Illinois' rich Corn Belt. Coupling sheer determination with unrelenting faith, the resident farmer campaigned for and won the mid-state nomination for the school's site. The communities of Peoria, Washington, and Batavia were chief competitors.

Pledges of acreage, stock, money, and town lots donated by McLean County residents surpassed all other town bids; thus, a knoll in North Bloomington at the junction of the Illinois Central and Chicago and Alton Railroad line became the proposed spot for the first state-supported teachers' college in the Mississippi Valley.

Abraham Lincoln, attorney of the State Board, drew up the financial papers for the main building to be located on the 56-acre lot donated by Meshack Pike, and construction commenced on the school that is now among the foremost teacher-training institutions in the United States.

Jesse Fell, father of ISNU, was the leading crusader in the heated battle to locate the Normal School in Bloomington.

Charles E. Hovey—

Chas E. Hovey

Charles E. Hovey, first ISNU president, was assisted by two other faculty members on Illinois Normal's opening day, October 5, 1857. He resigned the presidency in 1862 to lead the "Normal Rifles" in the Civil War, at which time he was promoted to brigadier-general.

The first president of Illinois Normal University, the first president of the State Teachers Institute, and the first editor of "The Illinois Journal"—these distinctions delineate the personality of Charles Edward Hovey.

Born in Thetford, Vermont, in 1827, the young schoolmaster was a product of Dartmouth College and once toyed with the idea of becoming a lawyer.

The task of not only setting ISNU's machinery in motion but of also perpetuating its ideals fell upon President Hovey.

A holiday spirit prevailed during the cornerstone laying of the main building in North Bloomington on September 29, 1857. Copies of the school charter, subscription lists, daily newspapers, and the Declaration of Independence were placed in the memorial block by attending dignitaries.

Meanwhile, the first university classes began on October 5, in Major's Hall, East Front Street, Bloomington. Nineteen pupils registered the first day, with the enrollment totaling 127 students by the close of the academic year.

Successful as Normal was in its chief purpose of teacher preparation, it could not prosper financially. Top heavy with debt created by the Panic of 1857 and the imminent Civil War, community pledges for the new building were not fulfilled. As a result, actual work on the structure was suspended from September, 1857, until the summer of 1859.

In an effort to quiet rumors of relocating the university, Principal Hovey began underwriting the debts incurred by the building. His buying of federal swamp lands created confidence on the part of land speculators, whose cash purchases enabled work on the structure to resume and eventually be completed in 1861.

The 1860 June commencement exercises opened the nearly completed building. Halls for two literary societies, and lecture organizations, the natural history museum, and an art gallery were located on the now-removed fourth floor.

During the Civil War, Hovey commanded the "Normal Rifles," which later became Company "A" of the Schoolmasters' Regiment. He died in 1897, leaving his eternal mark upon the Illinois Normal University.

Establishing the curriculum was a major task. Courses such as metaphysics and orthography were listed in the first catalog, published in 1860 with particular emphasis placed on the natural sciences. Social life centered around two literary societies—the Philadelphians and the Wroughtonians.

Such were the crucial opening days of the Illinois Normal University, that was endowed with a zealous leader and faithful community backing.

Lieutenant Joseph G. Howell, a member of the 1860 graduating class, was the first Normal casualty of the Civil War. Howell was killed at the battle of Pittsburg Landing in February, 1862. A marble plaque to this hero's memory still hangs in Old Main.

A magnificent four-story brick structure, complete with dome and silk flag, was the only building on the campus at the time this picture was taken in the 1860's. Classes were held on the first three floors, while the fourth floor housed the literary society hall, the museum, and the art gallery.

Old Main

Richard Edwards—

Richard Edwards.

Richard Edwards, a Welshman by birth, learned the English language through memorization of an English catechism. A public speaker of no mean reputation, the ISNU administrator received a number of calls to various Illinois churches. He resigned as president in 1867.

Richard Edwards became president of the State Normal University in September, 1862, and held the office for fourteen years. Upon him fell the crucial task of stabilizing the infant school during the war and post-war years.

President Edwards' biography exemplifies the tradition of America as the "land of opportunity." The youthful immigrant's family debarked from Wales to Ohio in 1832. Young Edwards was ten years old at the time. He was in full comprehension of the English language, having committed an English catechism to memory during early religious training.

Forsaking a carpentry apprenticeship in 1838, Richard Edwards undertook studies at the Bridgewater, Massachusetts, Normal School, from which he was graduated in 1846. He financed his way through college by means of part-time teaching. Graduate studies were continued at Harvard University and the Polytechnic Institute of Troy, New York.

Under Dr. Edwards' experienced guidance, ISNU emerged as the largest and most influential Normal in America. Basic to the 40-year-old leader's educational philosophy were the ideals of consecrating a right spirit in college students and providing each community with the type of professional leadership it so often lacked.

Fell Pond was the ideal setting for "modern" dancing by this group of Illinois State Normal University coeds. The pond has since been replaced by Fell Hall, which was built in 1918.

“Education . . . the grandest of enterprises.”

Art students used stereoscopes and drafting equipment to gain a working knowledge of perspective drawings. Gaslight fixtures are apparent in the upper righthand corner.

President Edwards was recognized as a public speaker of great power, an inspiring teacher, and an uncompromising idealist. His crusade for increased academic training marked him as the most successful exponent of the theory of normal schools in America.

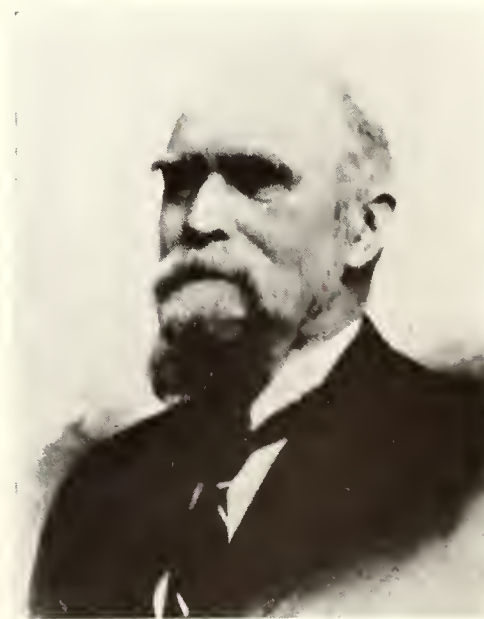

Perhaps President Edwards' outstanding achievement may be found in his role as the first president of two normal schools—one at Salem, Massachusetts, the other at St. Louis, Missouri—and as second president of ISNU. In reality, Dr. Edwards was the second “principal” and first president of ISNU, because the latter term was not applied to the top-office position until 1866.

It was a “status quo” curriculum during the 14-year Edwards administration, with only six standard categories of subjects incorporated in the early catalogs. These embraced language arts, criticism, higher mathematics, philosophy, vocal music, didactics, education methods, and optional studies.

Left: Mary Brooks, first teacher of the ISNU Model School, originally taught under President Hovey in the Peoria school system. She resigned her ISNU position after three years' service in Major's Hall to become Mrs. James Wiley. An illness caused her unexpected death in 1868.

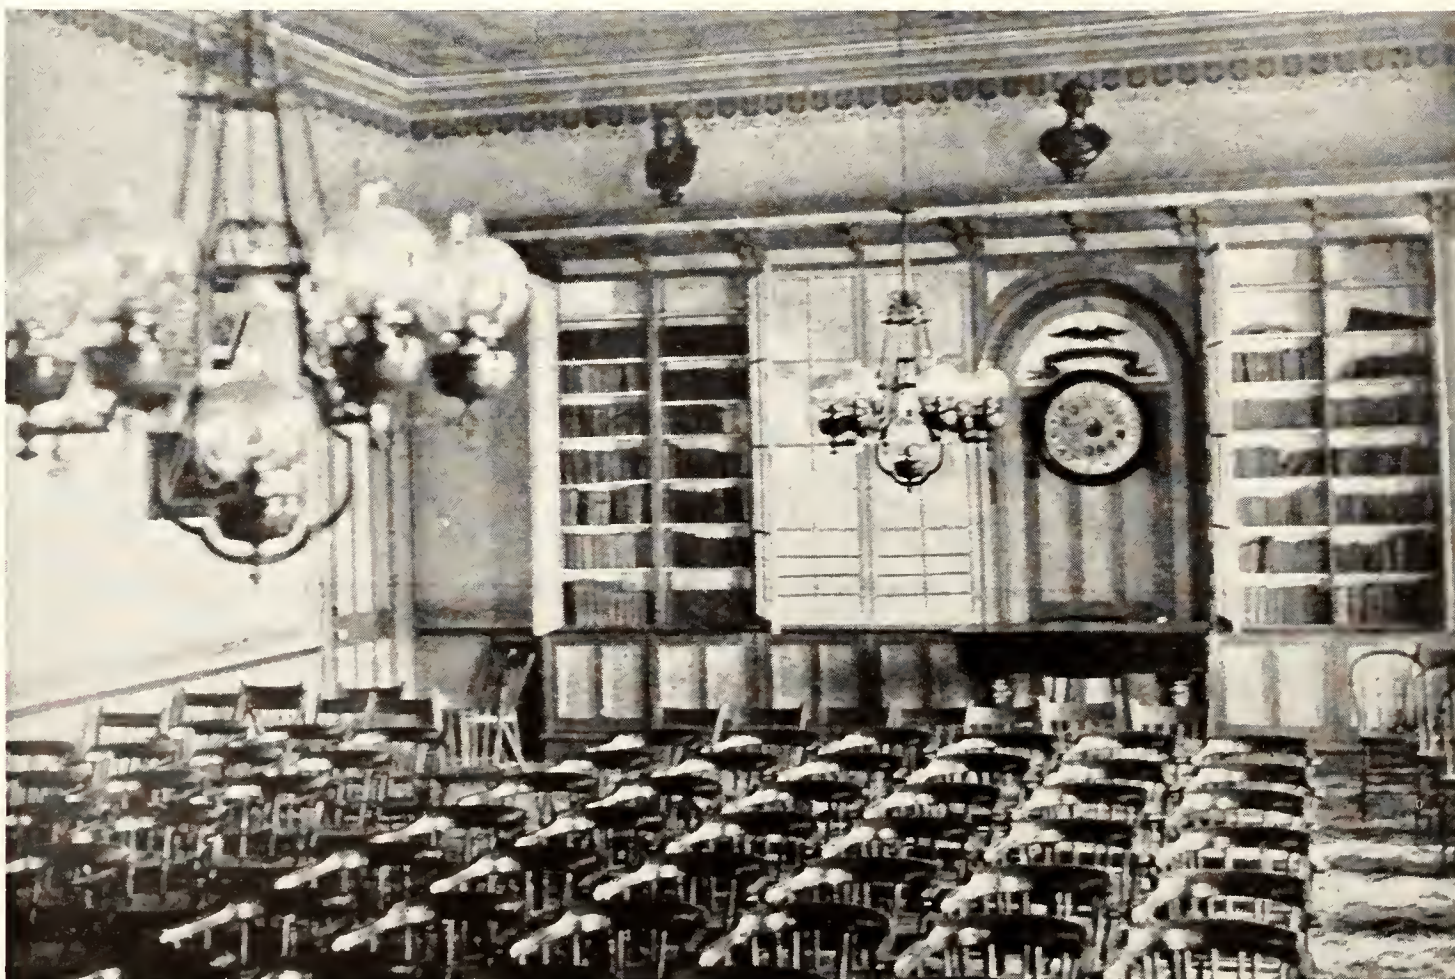

Right: Henry McCormick, an Irish immigrant, served at ISNU for almost forty years. Upon graduation from ISNU in 1868, Dr. McCormick became principal of the Normal Public School system. He joined the University staff in 1869 as instructor of geography and later advanced to the position of vice president.

"Readin', 'ritin', and 'rithmetic"—and whittling were included in the Training School program during the University's infant years. Stationary desks, adorned with fancy ironwork, were conventional classroom furniture. Hard, straight backed chairs offered little incentive for relaxation.

Sunday evening meetings in Wrightonian Hall furnished students and townspeople with essays and orations. Located on the now-removed fourth floor of Old Main, this second society hall was adorned with elaborate carpeting, rich curtains, and frescoed walls.

Political issues in regard to abolition and temperance sprouted in education circles, as well as other phases of life during the Civil War era. When, in 1876, President Edwards was nominated for Congress, he declined the honor, realizing fully his inability to carry out the desires of some Illinois Southern sympathizers. He was a strong fighter for the Northern cause and obtained permission from the State Board of Education to admit persons, regardless of race or creed, to the University after 1872.

The town of Normal received its charter during the prosperous years from 1865-1880. An irregular feature of the franchise stipulated that no intoxicating liquors were to be sold within town boundaries. A street car line, extending from downtown Bloomington to Old Main, providing transportation facilities for commuting students. Although co-educational housing was the rule rather than the exception until 1880, both sexes complied with strict curfew and study hours.

In the course of his distinguished career, President Edwards attained the goal of being the country's foremost educator. He presided over the American Normal School Association, led the Illinois State Teachers' Association, and became State Superintendent of Public Instruction for a one-year term in 1887.

Before his resignation at ISNU in January, 1876, the noted educator had received a call to no less than 22 normals, 13 denominational colleges, and three state Universities.

Prior to his death in 1908, Richard Edwards served for one year as the president of Blackburn College.

Edwin C. Hewett

E. C. Hewett

Edwin C. Hewett, President of ISNU 1876-1890, was a graduate of the Bridgewater, Massachusetts, Normal school. New England born, the one-time geography instructor was an ordained Baptist minister and widely-known Biblical scholar.

A second Bridgewater Normal School graduate was named to the ISNU presidency upon the resignation of Richard Edwards.

Edwin Crawford Hewett, president from January, 1876, until 1890, had been associated with ISNU for eighteen years. His original capacity was that of instructor of geography and history. Like his two predecessors, the 48-year-old Puritan gentleman was a native New Englander. His slight build, framing only 120 pounds, presented little indication of a vibrant, dynamic personality. The site of Worcester County, Massachusetts, and the date of November 1, 1828, supply the vital birth statistics. Abandoning an established shoemaker apprenticeship at the age of thirteen, the aspiring teacher worked his way through the elementary and academy schools. Theological practices illuminated President Hewett's background. He was recognized as a Biblical authority, taught Sunday School, and was an ordained Baptist minister.

It was at the Bridgewater college in the year 1851 that President Hewett first made the acquaintance of Richard Edwards, then assistant to the principal. President Hewett's teaching experiences at Bridgewater and Worcester, Massachusetts, preceded acceptance of the ISNU assignment.

“His life is a great legacy.”

A roster of sixteen members comprised the first Faculty Club organized by Charles DeGarmo, assistant in the Training School. President Hewett is seated third from the left in this formal grouping.

Journalism enthusiasts launched the first student newspaper, The Vidette, in February, 1888. Published monthly until 1907, the magazine-like issue featured poetry, essays, and editorials. Senior class members were responsible for the undertaking.

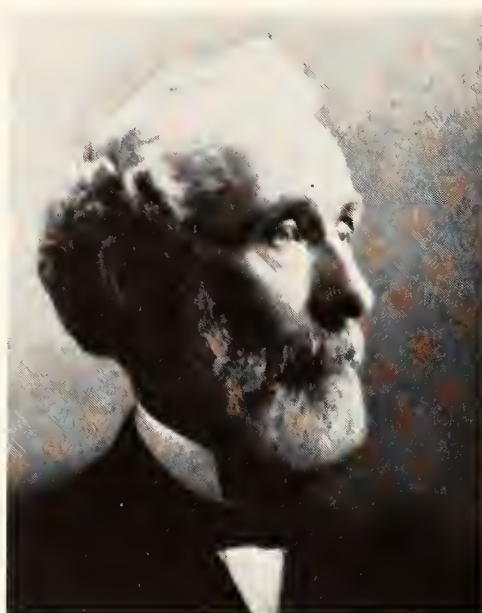

Strict adherence to the principles of accuracy and thoroughness dominated Dr. Hewett's thinking. He maintained that preciseness is the mark of a scholar and that ability in all common school branches is the prime requisite for successful teaching.

Unlike presidents past and those yet to come, Dr. Hewett made no attempt to change the existing curriculum. Instead, he concentrated on faculty improvement, setting as his prime goal the keeping of ISNU in the public interest.

Concern over the disputed question of purposeful teacher colleges arose in 1884. The stand that a normal school is one that has a sole purpose of teacher preparation rather than of emphasis on a set course of study was upheld.

Although a three-year teaching certificate was available, most students found it necessary to extend their preparation to four years in order to accommodate language and science requirements. Students desiring to teach secondary courses were required to study Latin, Greek, German, French, and mathematics.

Only a small percentage of the entering ISNU students were high school graduates, but they did possess teaching experience and the ability to pass rigid entrance examinations. University officials disregarded the students' preparation for college study. No credits from other institutions were transferable, on the assumption that ISNU could not recommend graduates on the basis of other schools' standards.

Requirements for education courses were increased from that of a single 15-week metaphysics course to five semesters of work including observations, a lecture series in theory and practice, psychology, and history and philosophy of education. In 1884, the first advanced course in "pedagogy" was inaugurated for graduate students and select undergraduates, with certificates awarded as evidence of work completed.

Extra-curricular activity centered around literary and debate societies, with the Philadelphians and Wrightonians dominating the orbit of interest. Exclusion of women members from the "men only" Ciceroian Oratory Society resulted in the formation of the Lady Sapphonians.

Recognition for establishing the first student Young Men's Christian Association in Illinois was afforded Ange Vernon Milner, head librarian at ISNU for thirty-seven years, began her work in 1890. Old Main's first-floor reception room was converted into ISNU's original library; it was later relocated in North Hall before the erection of the Milner building in 1940.

the ISNU group in 1871. Not to be outdone, the campus women founded the first college Young Women's Christian Association one year later, with headquarters in the basement White Room.

Journalism made its official debut on the campus with the February, 1888, issue of the Vidette. Four years later the first Index was published, featuring humorous anecdotes, photographs and essays.

One occasion of joy, another of sorrow, occurred during the course of the Hewett administration. On August 24, 1882, a two-day state-wide celebration honoring the quarter-centennial anniversary was launched. Charles E. Hovey, addressing the gathered throng, fondly reminisced about the school's founding and its advancements. The death of Jesse Fell on February 25, 1887, cast a shadow of sorrow throughout the Bloomington-Normal area. Years later, Fell Gate, Fell Avenue, and Fell Hall were dedicated to the memory of the fine gentleman-farmer.

At the conclusion of President Hewett's fourteen-year term, Illinois State Normal University progressed to a total of eighteen faculty members, 677 students, and a model School with 503 pupils. President Hewett tendered his resignation at the June, 1890, Board Meeting. He retired to manage a publishing firm and died in 1905.

John W. Cook

The nine-year president, John W. Cook, championed the cause to establish Normals at Charleston and DeKalb. That the Cook administration favored extra-curricular activities was evident in the increased number of athletic contests, dramatic productions, and oratorical tournaments.

North Hall was erected as the university's second classroom building in 1892. The transfer of the training school and the library to new buildings in later years transformed the rooms into headquarters for the geography and English departments.

John W. Cook—"A wise man

The Herbartian theory of education dominated modern thinking during John Williston Cook's nine-year administration.

Rising to the university's highest office in 1890, President Cook had been affiliated with the State Normal since 1862. As an outstanding orator and organizer, the mustached humorist was widely recognized in education circles.

With a definite look toward the future, President Cook championed the cause to establish three new buildings on the campus. His interest in additional state-supported normal schools resulted in the creation of the Charleston and DeKalb colleges. Illinois' backward attitude toward the normal school situation in the '90's was evident in the fact that New York State had twelve teacher preparatory institutions as compared with Illinois' one.

Improvement in the university's physical plant was manifested by the addition of a training school, gymnasium, and heating plant. "Old Castle," as the gymnasium was affectionately nicknamed, owed its unusual Tudor-Gothic style to the influence of German constructions. The turreted, gray stone structure was completed in the final years of the 19th century.

Because President Cook advocated further training for in-service teachers, a three-week summer institute was inaugurated for observation purposes. Lecture series and discussion periods were highlights of the agenda. A direct outgrowth of the institute service was the establishment of formal university extension courses in America, evolving around state centers of education. Through contact with other colleges, President Cook formed a well-rounded extra-curricular program. Dancing, gymnastics, and inter-collegiate athletics dominated the social scene. Such organizations as the Oratorical Association, the Athletic Association, and the Student Lecture Association flourished.

It was the task of Normal's educators to effect the acceptance of the new Herbartian doctrine in America. With encouragement from President Cook, twenty-one Normal students studied Herbartianism at the University of Jena, Germany. The infant philosophy emphasized the assumption that all subjects are related and that knowledge of one strengthens knowledge of all the others.

Acceptance of the newly established DeKalb Normal School presidency terminated the work of John Cook on the State Normal campus. A fitting memoriam was accorded the revered educator by the placement of a portrait plaque in the lobby of Cook Hall, as the old gymnasium was later renamed.

The academic year's activities were bound together for the first time in the 1892 Index. Senior class members, equipped with meager photographic equipment, produced the first small-sized annual. The format of each early edition changed with the whim of its editor. The book contained club articles, posed pictures, and advertisements.

Gymnasium

Illinois Governor J. P. Altgeld's influence was the prime factor for erecting a castle-like gymnasium instead of the conventional rectangular building. Similar constructions were built on the other state college campuses. The name "Gymnasium" above the main entrance has since been altered to "John W. Cook Hall."

“Queen of Fame”

Barred from the men's Ciceronian Society, a group of women formed the Sapphonian organization in the fall of 1887. One of the Society's productions, “Queen of Fame,” featured the crowning of Julia Foster as Sappho. The cultured arts group functioned until the early 1900s.

Social Hall

Architects' plans for a “Social Hall” in 1893 favored a Swiss chalet type of structure. Building costs were estimated at $15,000. Because of the depression of 1895, the building was not completed. The Student Union became a reality in September, 1956.

Arnold Tompkins

A call to the Chicago Normal School ended the one-year tenure of President Arnold Tompkins. The idealistic philosopher's chief legacy was the reorganization of the out-moded curriculum. Student self-activity and practice teaching were included in the revamping.

Arnold Tompkins—"The

Reorganization of the curriculum best identifies the service of Normal University's fifth president, Arnold Tompkins.

Born in the rural area of Edgar County, Illinois, in 1849, the tall, Lincoln-like character graduated from the Terre Haute Normal School. Prior to his selection as Normal University's chief pilot in 1899, President Tompkins served as Professor of Pedagogy at the State University of Illinois, Champaign, and as superintendent of the Franklin, Indiana, common school system.

Hailed as a philosopher and idealist of education, President Tompkins embarked on a campaign to revamp the school's out-moded course of study. Foremost among his revolutionary ideas were greater emphasis on practice teaching, more extensive secondary teacher preparation, and flexibility of the curriculum.

His philosophy centered around student self-activity and practical application of knowledge. This thinking prompted such writings as "The Science of Discourse" and "The Philosophy of Teaching." Because President Tompkins' brief career at Normal University was interrupted by a call to the Chicago school system in 1900, his visions were never fully realized; however, his influence lingered on to effect more radical changes in the organization, administration and the spirit of ISNU than that of any other administrator since 1870.

Debate Send-off

Debate tournaments, as the paramount extra-curricular function, aroused a degree of partisan spirit comparable to that of a modern football game. Throngs of students, assembled at the Normal railroad depot, gave their representatives a rousing send-off to the annual Inter-Collegiate Forensic Contest.

Bloomer Girls

Bloomer gymsuits and long stockings offered little freedom during women's physical education classes. Intramurals were ushered in with a twenty-team basketball tournament at the turn of the century, under the auspices of the Women's Athletic Association.

David Felmley

Thirty years of presidential service exemplify the career of David Felmley. He assumed the top administrative post in 1900. An advocate of simplified spelling, the mustached New Englander released ISNU correspondence sporting phonetic spelling.

David Felmley—"If you

The turn of the century gave rise to the longest administration of any one ISNU president—the 30 year term of David Felmley. The New Jersey born educator was named to the top post only after convincing the Teachers College Board that he would continue in the presidential capacity regardless of offers from other colleges. This action was, of necessity, spurred by the not-yet-forgotten one-year service of Arnold Tompkins.

President Felmley first joined the Normal school staff in 1890, succeeding John Cook as head of the mathematics department. As a graduate of Michigan University, he had received the highest marks ever accorded one student up to that period. Administrative work at Carrollton, Illinois, preceded the ISNU appointment.

The University of Illinois education department facilities threatened the advancement of the normal college during the Felmley era. Equipped with top-notch salaries, lighter teacher-class loads, and more resourceful administrative techniques, the state university was able to lure more would-be-teachers to its campus and thus to reduce teacher college enrollments. It was during a clash between the two universities that President Felmley championed a campaign to maintain the status of state teachers colleges in Illinois.

President Felmley's philosophy of education included

Fell Hall, dedicated in 1918, bears little resemblance to the present-day dormitory. Naval personnel utilized the residence hall's facilities during World War II.

the idea that a four-year curriculum should not be required of all students; rather, that students should be trained to meet only the needs of a specific Community. He succeeded in converting the normal school into the present-day teachers college, comprised of several divisions for the preparation of both elementary and secondary teachers.

The opening of the first summer school took place in 1901 as an aid to in-service teachers. A six weeks' summer term, with 544 persons in attendance, launched the first session.

The spring of 1911 gave birth to the Department of Rural Education, with a broad two-year curriculum program.

ISNU's original charter contained a clause requiring agricultural education. The contract went unheeded until 1911, when steps were taken to develop the farm curriculum. The 100-acre area set aside for the model farm gave rise to ten buildings and several classes of livestock in 1912.

Although the university was given the right to grant Bachelor in Education degrees in 1907, students did not take full advantage of the four-year curriculum until the early '20's.

Children in the Illinois Soldiers' Orphan Home, since renamed Illinois Soldiers' and Sailors' Children's School, became part of the ISNU training program in 1916. Schoolrooms were then located in an outmoded frame building at the outskirts of Normal.

Dean Herman Henry Schroeder was ISNU's second acting president. The professor of education presided in 1930 and 1933, while Board members were considering permanent administrators.

Warm weather lured many an art student equipped with easel and brush out of doors to reproduce the campus green on canvas.

Adoption of an Illinois Civil Administrative Code in 1917 brought ISNU and the four other state teachers colleges under the jurisdiction of a single board. Normal school presidents approved the idea of unity rule for the five colleges; however, they disliked the lack of co-operation, red-tape management, and political interference practiced by Board members. This organization has evolved into the present-day Teachers College Board.

The initial step toward an established University health service was taken in 1923. Wages were set aside for the first school nurse, with offices to be located in Cook Hall.

Five major buildings were constructed during the course of the Felmley reign. In 1912, the Illinois State Legislature appropriated funds for the Metcalf Training School, named for the school's first principal.

Fell Hall, the first on-campus dormitory, was opened to women students in 1918. The red-brick building's south wing was not completed until mid-century because World War I expenditures left inadequate funds. Honor residents became an integral factor in dormitory life.

arts program might be extended, the Industrial Arts Building was erected in 1917. Capen Auditorium, named for Charles L. Capen, Bloomington Board member, was herein located.

In 1925, Henry McCormick Gymnasium appeared on the far south side of campus. Three years later, the land northeast of Old Main was cleared for the building of the David Felmley Hall of Science. Both structures were dedicated during the 1930 Homecoming week-end.

A kindergarten was incorporated in the training school program in 1903. Other improvements to the university program included the creation of a music department in 1909, and increased manual arts training. In the summer of 1914, a business department, complete with typing, stenography, bookkeeping, and commercial law was created. Physical education in the form of a recognized department made its debut in 1909, with the listing of eight courses in the university catalog.

A radiant summer afternoon lends the picturesque theme for this southeast view of Old Main. The unfamiliar parkway winding through mid-campus has since been replaced with sidewalks.

Extracurricular activities flourished during the Felmley regime. The Varsity Club (since renamed the University Club), Women's League, the Women's Athletic Association (now WRA), Gamma Phi, and "N" Club were just a few of the various groups that came into existence. Departmental organizations, such as the Art Club and Lowell Mason, appeared on the scene. Religious, language, and honorary societies were established. In conjunction, Alpha chapter of Gamma Theta Upsilon, the first honorary geographic fraternity, extended its scope nationally in the year 1928.

The first Homecoming festivities of 1920-21 highlighted the academic year with the Jesters' play, the parade, and a football game rounding out the week-end program.

Because of ill health, President Felmley submitted his resignation in the fall of 1929; however, the Board voted unanimously to keep him in office. He remained until his death on January 24, 1930.

Harry A. Brown—"He

H. A. Brown

Harry Alvin Brown piloted ISNU through the formative depression years. His unheralded three-year career was brought to an abrupt end at the request of the Teachers College Board in June, 1933. President Brown is credited for the establishment of an on-campus Bureau of Appointments.

Three trying depression years dampened the aspirations of Normal University's seventh president, Harry Alvin Brown.

Selected from a field of thirty-six candidates, the aloof, native New Englander materialized a complete curriculum revision for Illinois' leading teacher training institute. He assumed the presidential duties in July, 1930, at the age of fifty-one.

President Brown possessed a broad background in both administration and teaching experiences. He had recently served for thirteen years as overseer of the Wisconsin State Teachers College in Oshkosh after superintending schools in the Main and New Hampshire public systems.

ISNU had originally been granted a coveted "A" rating by the North Central Association; however, the required teacher load and the course of study fell so far below minimum standards that Normal had tumbled to a low bracket in the listings before President Brown's rise to the helm. With a singleness of purpose to have the university rated once again as unsurpassable, the president organized the school into divisions and raised teacher certification qualification to four years. Then ISNU again joined the "superior" ranks.

Strangely enough, teacher college enrollments did not wane during the formative depression years. Quite the contrary; aspiring teachers found that low tuition rates were more enticing than industry's low salaries. Faculty salary cuts were effected to equalize the budget.

President Brown was impersonal in faculty relationships. He neither asked for nor accepted staff opinions. Dissension mounted as a result of rash and seemingly unguided decrees, such as the replacement of faithful staff members with some of the president's past acquaintances.

Criticism regarding coercion and favoritism was registered by faculty members at the Normal School Board's monthly meeting in June, 1933. Much secrecy clouds the resulting investigation; however, the Board ultimately requested President Brown's resignation on the grounds that he had issued an illegal transcript.

Unfavorable publicity concerning the minor scandal was gratefully withheld. Dr. Brown left just three years after having accepted the office; he turned his talents toward guiding a Massachusetts school system.

Foremost among President Brown's physical plant accomplishments was the establishment of an on-campus Bureau of Appointments with up-to-date records. The Saunders Memorial tablet outside Cook Hall was also erected during this era.

Dean Herman Henry Schroeder was once again named acting president. He had served in this capacity for four months following President Felmley's death in 1930, at which time he was considered a "favorite son" for the head office. Dean Schroeder continued as ISNU's acting leader until the appointment of Raymond W. Fairchild.

Fitting tribute was accorded President Felmley through the dedication of the Felmley Hall of Science. Completed in 1929, the three-story structure was dedicated during 1930 Homecoming festivities. A cut in university expenditures curtailed full completion of the building until recent years.

R. W. Fairchild

Raymond W. Fairchild, twenty-three years the president of ISNU, graduated from Northwestern University. Named to the Normal school post in October, 1933, the one-time city superintendent of Elgin, Illinois, schools, revived friendly faculty relations.

Raymond W. Fairchild—

Restoration of harmonious relations between faculty and administration ranked as the foremost task of ISNU's eighth overseer, Raymond W. Fairchild. Summoned to the presidential vacancy in October, 1933, the 44-year-old Northwestern University professor remained at the ISNU helm for 23 years. During these two decades, the school witnessed physical growth beyond the fondest expectations.

Raymond Fairchild was born in Bismarck, Illinois, in September, 1889. Upon culmination of undergraduate work at the University of Michigan in 1914, the biological science major became dean of men at the Wisconsin State Teachers College. He later gained experience in school administration as the city superintendent of the school systems of Elgin, Illinois, and Fond du Lac, Wisconsin. While completing doctoral work in the field of education and administration, President Fairchild taught part-time at the Northwestern University School of Education, where he formulated a specialized curriculum for normal proctors.

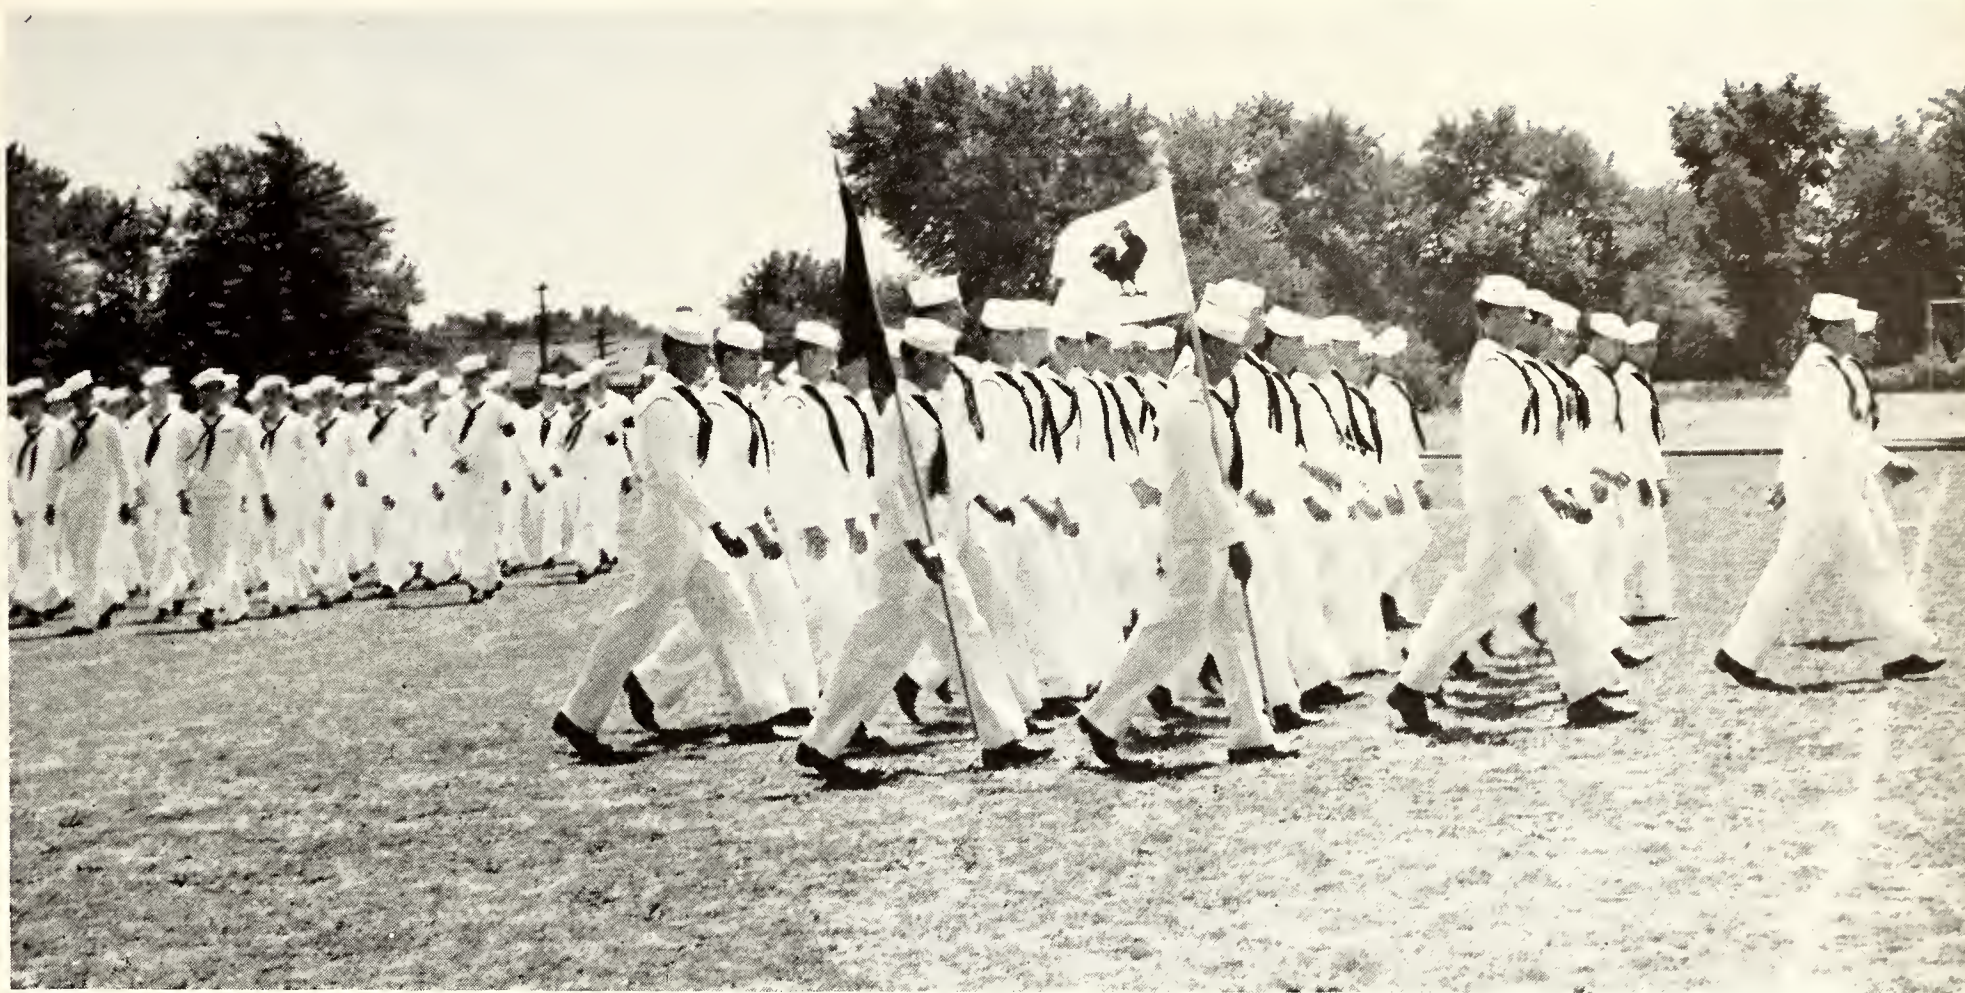

Because he recognized imperfections in state teacher college training, Dr. Fairchild inaugurated the annual "Administration Round-Up" for public school principals and superintendents in 1932. Seminars were devoted to the discussion of grievances and to methods of class improvements.

In conjunction with broadening the ISNU scope, a County Contact system was launched in 1934 to orientate prospective collegians with Normal University's beatitudes. By means of this system, faculty members, laden with catalogs and other printed information, personally visited each Illinois county to answer the innumerable queries of high school seniors.

Summer workshops, clinics, and specialized courses also became an integral part of the university services during the mid-1930's.

An accelerated drive to further active alumni clubs began in 1937. Graduating seniors, urged to form organizations within their respective counties, were in part responsible for the 31 clubs located in four states.

Curriculum enrichment was deemed necessary during the Fairchild era. Two-year courses were discontinued in the early 1940's. Psychology was revamped into a separate department from that of education and offered students a minor teaching field through its pattern of study. Agriculture professors crusaded relentlessly for department approval according to Smith-Hughes standards. By establishing a four-year curriculum in 1929, and later equipping the model farm with the necessary facilities, the university hoped to gain the approval of both the Federal and State Vocational Boards. The Board's stamp of approval was required in order that schools to which ISNU's graduates were contracted might take advantage of the special funds given for the Smith-Hughes program. Graduate work was recognized in 1946.

ISNU struggled through both World War II and the Korean affair. Instead of sending its male enrollment into service as it had during the Civil War and World War I, ISNU trained Naval personnel on campus. Once again, the university courted a regimental air. Civilian Pilot Training courses were offered by the Federal Government, with War Production training initiated in the Industrial Education Department. In December, 1942, only one year after the War's birth, ISNU became the training center for Naval Aviation cadets under the V-5 program. Reorganization under the Navy V-12 program occurred in 1943. Fell and Smith Halls, the latter purchased in 1943, were converted into Naval quarters. Professors, confronted with the unique experience of addressing a class of uniformed men, geared their courses to dwell on war subjects. Students with passing grades eventually were commissioned as ensigns, whereas those who flunked joined the ranks of the unspecialized.

Little resemblance to the present-day Old Main shell is evident in this picture of the early structure. The bell, tolling the curfew hour and classtime dismissal, was twice replaced.

Old Main's progressive deterioration spurred the removal of the grand dome and top floor in 1946. The two porches and balustrades were removed at a later date.

ISNU implemented the veterans' post-war program by issuing high school diplomas to those servicemen who had not yet completed secondary training, but expressed the desire to enter college. A Veterans Administration Guidance Center for student testing and advisement was established during the post-war period.

With the original GI bill came an avalanche of veteran-scholars. Temporary classrooms and housing units erected after the war to meet increased enrollment are still being used in 1957. Cardinal Court, as the make-shift homes were dubbed, continues to provide living facilities for men students and married veterans.

of the third floor and clock tower of Old Main in 1946. During that same period, University officials outlined a long-term building program with the Illinois Post-War Planning Commission.

When in 1945 the Illinois General Assembly recognized the lack of qualified teachers for exceptional children, ISNU was selected as the center for the Illinois Division of Special Education. The Georgian-type special training building, completed in 1951, incorporates classrooms, a warm water pool, treatment centers, a solarium, and clinical wards. Recently renamed in honor of the late president, Fairchild Hall also houses the University Health Service.

Six additional buildings were erected during the 23-year term of President Fairchild. Milner Library, taking its name from ISNU's first librarian, was completed just prior to the start of World War II.

General university administration offices were transferred from Old Main into the new Administration Building in 1950. The Bureau of Appointments and a relatively new Publicity Office were herein located.

the Jesse E. Rambo Home was completed. Featuring both a modern and a conventional side, the duplex is utilized by senior students in the home economics curriculum for a nine-week period.

Three bond-revenue resident halls were added to the ISNU physical plant in the course of three years. The twin units of Dunn and Barton Halls appeared on the campus scene in 1954. Named for Lillian Barton, former Dean of Women, and Richard F. Dunn, Bloomington board member, both dormitories were equipped with stationary steel furniture.

Realizing his inability to return to office following a one-year leave of absence in 1954, President Fairchild requested that the Board seek his successor. He succumbed to diabetes mellitus on June 12, 1956.

Dean Arthur H. Larsen again assumed the role of Acting President; he retained the office until the selection of Dr. Robert Gehlmann Bone in 1956.

The Centennial Year

Illinois State Normal University's ninth president, Robert G. Bone.

The Executive

It is with genuine pleasure that I write this brief word for the INDEX as it goes to press for our Centennial edition. I feel sure that the founders of ISNU and its early staff would be not only satisfied but also thrilled to see the present result of their dreams and expectations. If they could see and know our student body, if they could look at our alumni and their activities, if they could meet our staff and read of the honors and the contributions they have made and are making in the field of education, these founders would realize that ISNU has made its place in the world. As we look toward the future, may the friends and associates of ISNU of the decades ahead be as proud of this University in their time as we are now.

Dean of the University, Arthur H. Larsen.

Administrative Council

Perhaps the most integral unit in the coordination of the university is the administrative council. Heading the council is President Robert G. Bone. In addition to his work as dean of the university, Mr. Arthur Larsen is also vice-chairman of the council and head of the graduate school. Miss Elsie Brenneman directs the admissions office and is secretary of the council. Directing the operations of the physical units of the university is Mr. Bjarne Ullsvik, administrative assistant to the president. Serving in the capacity of business manager is Mr. Preston Ensign. The student deans, Miss Anna Keaton and Mr. Richard Hulet, counsel students in regard to problems in job seeking, housing, and scholarship. Mr. John Carrington guides the seniors as they enter work in the laboratory schools. Summoned from time to time by the president, this group advises him on administrative matters of the university.

A dream fulfilled—the new Student Union in foliage frame invites all ISNU students to enjoy themselves.

Student Union

September 1956 marked the opening of the new focal point of campus activity. With its ballroom and lounge, the Union depicts elegant living. The cafeteria provides meals in a pleasant atmosphere, while the Cage still retains its old trait—a place to meet, eat, talk, etc. In its entirety, the Student Union is a symbol of friendliness and solidarity.

Ken Janda and Dan Andersen reach for their butter while Sandy Nardin and June Enos wait patiently.

Charles Stoeckl lines up an angle shot while a visitor, Damon Brown, and Charles Vass wonder whether he will be successful.

Barton Hall

The atmosphere is casual, but exciting; the occupants are friendly and enthusiastic; the place is Barton Hall, home of upper-class women.

Built six years ago and named for Lillian Barton, a former dean of women, this dormitory accommodates one hundred and fifty-nine junior and senior women. The Hall is governed by a House Council that compiles the rules, and by the Judicial Council that sees that they are respected. The dormitory is under the supervision of Miss Lorraine Foster.

The girls began this year's activities by taking third honors with their Homecoming decoration. At Halloween, Barton and Walker Halls presented skits, and again Barton proved successful by winning three of the six prizes. At Christmas, the girls sponsored a formal, and at Thanksgiving, Christmas, and Easter, the Barton-Dunn kitchen prepared special dinners for the girls.

With animals for company, Barbara Dunn settles down for a long nap.

Joyce Sager takes time out from Barton's busy switchboard to exchange gossip with JoEllen Bidner and Flo Nagel.

Ionic columns lead the way into the friendly atmosphere of Barton Hall, twin dormitory to Dunn Hall and the upper-class women's dormitory on campus.

Dunn Hall

A popular resident home for ISNU men is Dunn Hall, housing one-hundred and sixty-one men. Each spring the Dunn men elect an executive council and five officers who represent the entire dormitory.

Throughout the year Dunn Hall sponsors many activities; the major events are the formal dance, the Bubble Bounce, and Lollypop Day, an annual spring picnic held with Barton Hall on South campus.

Don Blattner and John White are hindering Ron Schultz as he prepares for a big date.

Now in its sixth year on campus, Dunn Hall offers commodious and comfortable living for ISNU men.

This year Dunn participated in Homecoming festivities by capturing second place with a pirate ship whose figure-head was a determined Redbird. The theme was "Captain Redbird ain't a kidding," and when Dunn men say they are an active group, they "ain't a kidding either."

According to Bill Muelhauser, Tom Carr, John White, and Jerry Ruble, listening to Hi-Fi is the perfect recreation.

The warmth of Fell Hall, the first dormitory on the Illinois State Normal University campus, provides a contrast to winter's frigid art.

Fell Hall

Within the red-brick exterior of Fell Hall live 238 girls, often seen attired in blue sweatshirts and red and white beanies. These girls sponsor a continual stream of activities throughout the year. First on the schedule for 1956-57 was the Homecoming decoration, followed by "Once Upon A Christmas," the annual winter formal. Helping the sophomores with numerous problems are the twenty honor residents, aided by Miss Mary Harding, assistant house director, and Miss Isabelle Terrill, director of Women's Dormitories.

All lost giraffes are welcomed by Joy Hale, Joanne Olson, and Pat Mallaney.

Bonnie Wahlheim, Carol DeRocker, Barbara Derby, and Judy Anderson complete Fell Hall's Homecoming decoration.

In the winter, the landscaping surrounding Smith Hall provides a fragile beauty; and in the spring, the gardens are a spectrum of color.

Smith Hall

Fraternal living is perhaps at its peak in the oldest men's dormitory on ISNU's campus, Smith Hall. This dormitory was first organized as a University lodging in 1934 when the need for living quarters for men was recognized. The home of Colonel D. C. Smith was equipped with old furniture from the newly decorated Fell Hall and with rented articles from the Smith Estate. In the fall of 1937, dining room facilities were added and, later on, expanded. During the war years Smith Hall was used by the Navy for their V-12 program, but in 1945, again regained its position as the only men's dormitory on campus, and it retained this status until 1950, when Dunn Hall was built.

Within this first male dormitory live fifty-two ISNU men, who throughout the year participate actively in every all-campus event. At Homecoming, their decoration is certain to be one of the most unique; their stunt at the Stunt Show is always hilarious; and their booth at the Spring Carnival is one of the best. In addition to all-school activities, the Smith Hall men sponsor hayrack rides in the fall, a formal dance in the spring and winter, and innumerable closed parties.

Ken Pangle, Ray Rebuck, Jim Hill, and Tom Hughes harmonize in barbershop quartet fashion while Tom Patrick plays the melody.

During a few moments of quiet after dinner, Russ Thiems reads the evening newspaper.

Walker Hall

The latest in design of modern dormitories here on campus is Walker Hall, housing 377 freshman girls and 33 honor residents. Now in its second year, it has already established an impressively active agenda.

First of the activities was Homecoming decorations, in which Walker placed first with a theme based on the National Conventions. The night before Homecoming decorations were finished a coffee and doughnut midnight soiree was held with Barton Hall. For Halloween, Walker and Barton halls held a joint party, attended by 700 girls clad predominantly as ghosts and gremlins. The major social event of the year was the Christmas formal, "White Fantasia."

The hall is governed by social and judicial councils. Miss Bette Soldwedel and Miss Visitacion Miguel are the co-ordinators of this dormitory.

Facing toward Main Street, ISNU's largest dormitory provides an impressive sight to passers-by.

Boys off Campus

Bob Townsend, Al Tuntland, Bob Merhaut, Ken Janda, and Tom Olson find that one of the advantages of living off campus is the proximity of the ice box.

Seventy per cent of the men at ISNU live in homes off campus. These student houses vary in size from that of one student to "small dormitory sized" homes. Some men are given the privilege of cooking their meals, and all become adept at light housekeeping—an experience they are sure to remember.

Participation in intramural basketball and bowling tournaments sponsored by the various houses plays an important part in the life of off-campus men. At Christmas many homes have parties, and, in the spring, picnics are part of the men's sundry activities.

Norman Gee, Jim Clark, and Jerry Manning believe in keeping up to date with contemporary literature.

Girls off Campus

A pizza party after hours is enjoyed by Harriet Hendrickson, Phyllis Spalenka, Adrienne Oblouk, and Donna Burcar.

A game of Chinese Checkers is the perfect pastime for Janet Skinner, Jane Phillips, and Wilma Fitzpatrick.

Off-campus life is unifying; it is diversifying. It is dependable; it is independent. It is collective; it is separate.

Women who reside in off-campus housing participate "en masse" in many organized activities as well as individual house projects. Collectively, each house elects a president who automatically becomes a member of Women's League Central Board and the House President's Board.

Houses differ widely in their individual activities. Many support the University in the Homecoming spirit; many organize closed parties, and still others sponsor activities varying from picnics to simple informative house meetings.

Tests, tours, and treats—meetings, movies and mixers—education and tradition, receptions and convocations—Orientation Week again!

All residence halls were opened on Sunday, September 10, the day which also unfolded a week of wonderful confusion for all new students at Normal. A convocation held in McCormick Gym for these students and their parents was concluded by a delectable picnic supper on inner campus.

Bright and early on Monday, the students assembled in Capen auditorium and proceeded on tours around campus. In the afternoon, proficiency tests for men and women were scheduled and the day until late in the afternoon, an ordeal which was succeeded by various open house gatherings and movies at Capen. Thursday afternoon registration was completed. That evening an added highlight appeared within this eventful week: the watermelon feast (no limitations!).

Psychological tests and conferences with the department heads were included on Tuesday morning's schedule, followed in the afternoon by the administration of reading tests, library meetings, and departmental meetings.

Friday a serious note entered the fun: regular classes began. This day was filled with confusion. Freshmen couldn't find their right classes — transfer students couldn't even find the right buildings!

held; a movie was scheduled for the evening and the day was ended with the New Crop Hop in overflowing McCormick Gym.

The entire student body breathed a sigh. It was a sigh of relief because the confusion was over. Yet it held a little sadness; the fun was over. But then too, Orientation Week will reappear next year with its crop of new, expectant students.

Mercury Recording Artists Ralph Marterie and his band provide a rhythmic musical background for the November Big Four Dance.

Big Fours Mean a Big Time

It's the talk of the campus. The special occasion is the approaching Big Four dance. Gathered over cokes in the Cage, the gang discusses just what these dances are. Interested freshmen want to know what the excitement is all about, so the upper classmen try to answer their queries: Big Four dances appear on campus four times yearly, and are financed on the block basis of the season tickets purchased. Held in both sections of McCormick Gym, single dances have attracted as many as 2,000 university students and alumni. Sponsorship is by the Big Four Committee, for which Jerry Ruble and Marilyn Salima serve as co-chairman. Faculty advisors are Dean Anna L. Keaton and Dean Richard Hulet.

Setting a mood of sheer enjoyment which prevails throughout the entire evening are such well-known groups as the Les Elgart or Ralph Marterie orchestras. After the last strains of "I'll See You In My Dreams," various groups go out, and, over a late snack, discuss the dance. However, 1:30 A.M. comes around much too quickly, and, as if the melody of "A Kiss in the Dark" could still be heard, the evening is ended.

Catching up on the latest news of the Big Four Dance are Sandra Nardin, Bob Merhaut, Terry Collier, Joyce Schulte, Jo Vogelsang, Paul Cary, Paulette Hase, and Everett Hess.

ISNU trains teachers not only for the United States, but for foreign countries also. The many foreign students on our campus illustrate this fact, for after these people have completed their education here, most of them will return to their own countries to teach.

The "Struckmen"

The 1957 football Redbirds started and finished the grid season impressively—holding a favored Bradley team to a 7-7 tie in the opener and downing Wesleyan for the fifth straight year by 19-7 in the traditional season's finale.

In the Bradley game, Darrell Spang scored the only Redbird touchdown in the second quarter to cap a 91-yard drive by the ISNU team. Jim Barnes kicked the point which tied the score and also booted the field goal in the following game which gave Coach Ed Struck's men a slim 3-0 victory over the Northern Illinois Huskies.

A low point in the up and down season came next in the 6-14 loss to Eastern Illinois, but the Struckmen bounced back strong to thrill Home-comers with a 22-7 victory in a mild upset over a good Eastern Michigan team from Ypsilanti. Carl Eichstaedt, junior halfback and ordinarily a sub for Spang, scored two touchdowns in the game, with one of them coming on a snappy 49-yard sprint through the center of the Huron line.

The three straight losses to Central Michigan, Lewis, and Western Illinois followed; but again the Redbirds showed the capacity to come back and surprised the Southern Illinois Salukis with a 27-13 victory at Carbondale. Spang's 95-yard runback of a kickoff brought the Redbirds from behind and inspired the ISNU team to a strong second half.

The 19-7 win in the neighborhood "battle for the hatchet" with Wesleyan was much closer than the score indicated. A 42-yard dash for a touchdown by Spang proved to be one of the game's highlights for the ISNU fans after a stubborn Wesleyan pass defense caused trouble for the Redbirds.

Co-captains Spang, Don Magee, and Harold Henson proved to be team leaders both on and off the field. Spang was named most valuable by his teammates; both he and Henson were all-IIAC selections. Two juniors, Jack Mitchell, end, and quarterback John Thomas, were named as co-captains for the 1957 grid season.

Hail, ISNU

"Go, go Normal" shout the varsity cheerleaders, Bob Shields, Chuck Schmidt, Joyce Schulte, Gloria Kaszynski, and Sharon Palmer.

Booming noises come out as "N-O-R-M-A-L." Then the crowd is apprehensive. The cheerleaders encourage "We want a touchdown," a cry which is followed by "Make that point!" And then uncontrolled cheering.

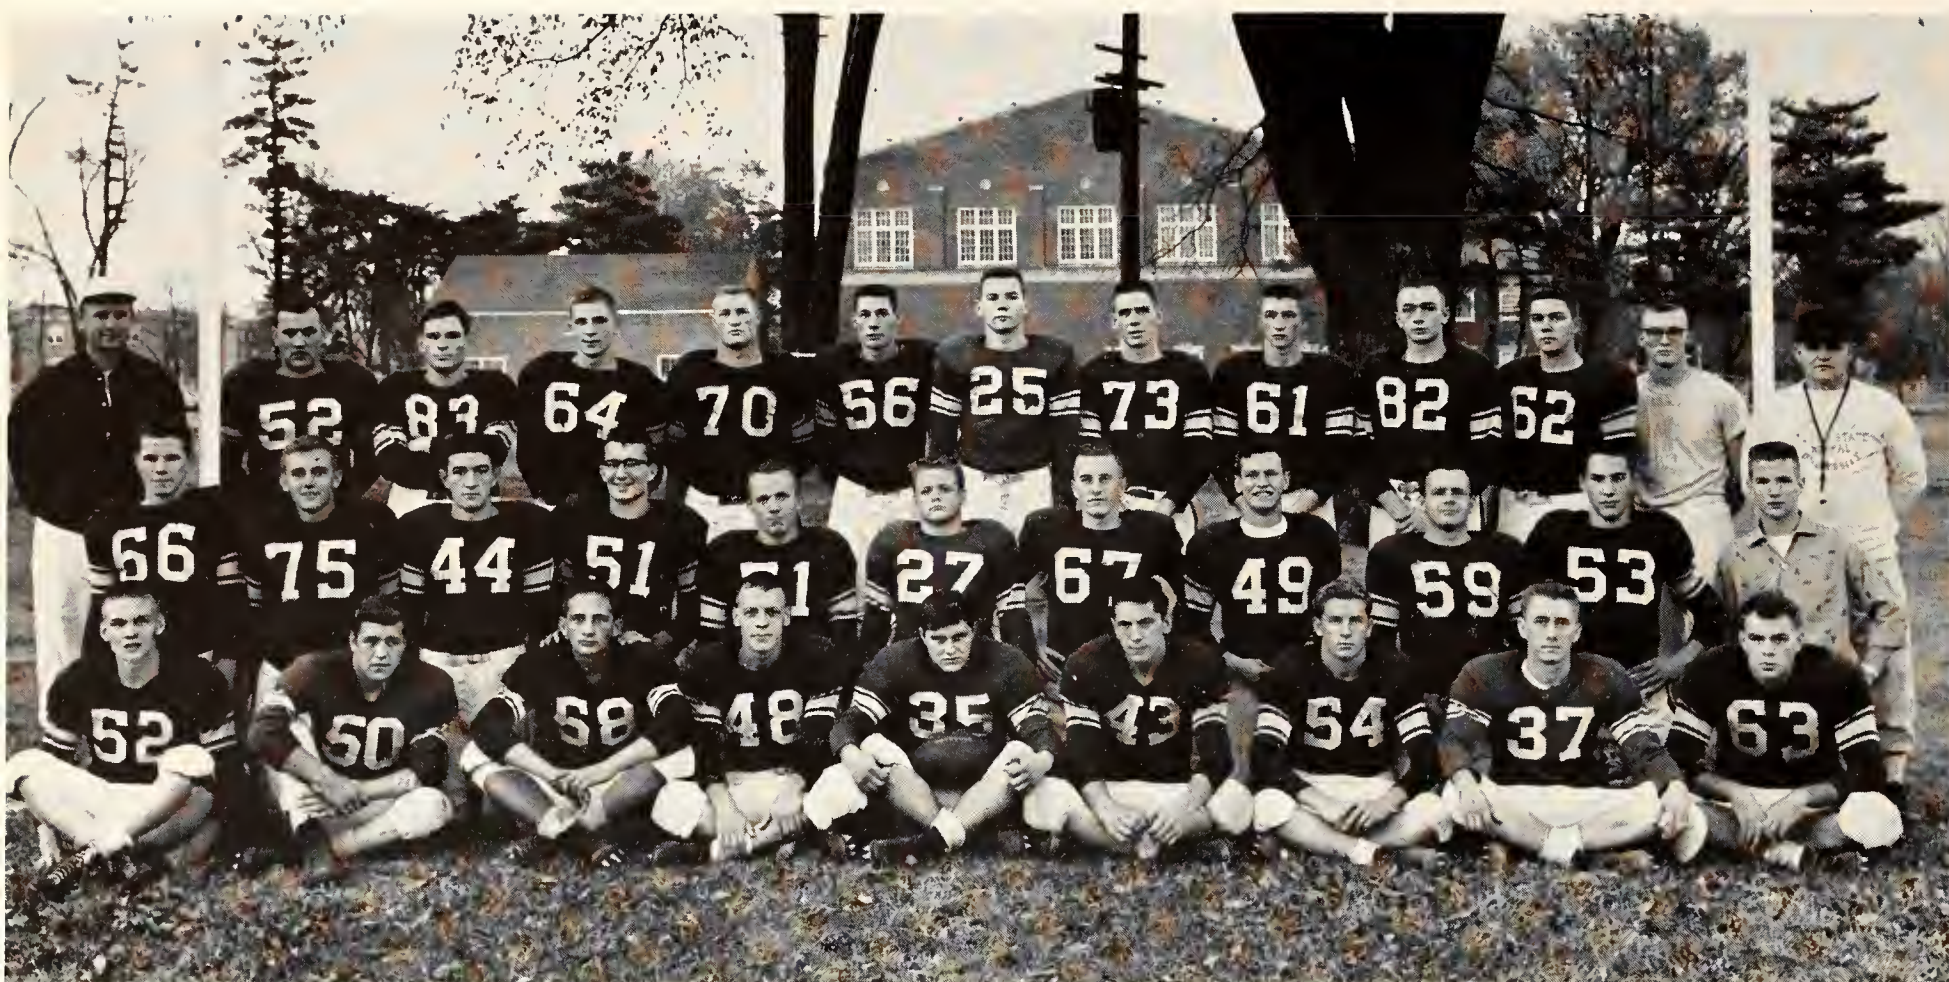

With hats reversed, the members of the marching band leave the field. Spectators with hoarse voices exit slightly frozen from having sat two and a half hours in a November frost. Players, slightly worse for wear, leave the field. But everyone is jubilant. The ISNU Redbirds have won another game.

Apprehension, satisfaction, and exuberance cover the faces of a group of ISNU fans at the Normal-Wesleyan game.

A musical expression of confidence in the Redbirds radiates from the ISNU marching band which is present at all home games.

"B" Team Football

The Redbird "B" team football schedule serves the dual purpose of giving a chance at competition to men who do not qualify for the varsity group and of building a basis for future Redbird varsity squads. Warren Crews was coach of the 1956 Redbird football "B's," with help from Bill Booker, a graduate assistant, and Ron Slack, a senior assistant. The 1956 football reserves completed the season with a 3-2-1 record, opening the season in a 19-19 tie game with the Eastern Illinois seconds. They followed this game with a 13-7 victory over Western's reserves, but lost to Eastern 0-39 in a return game with the Panthers. A 13-7 victory over Northern came before the 21-20 thriller over the Wesleyan second team. The final game of the season resulted in a 7-14 loss to the Western Illinois reserves, making it 1-1 for the season with the Leatherneck reserves.

Quarterback Vic Toune was a consistent leader for Coach Crews, with Vern Banister, Chuck Lehman, and Fred Moore doing much of the backfield work for the Redbird "B's." Remembered for line play during the six reserve games were Larry Barrett, Glen Wallace, Chuck O'Dell, Bob Ocepeck, and Charles Lane.

Hill and Dalers

Only a few inches separated the Redbird cross country team from the first IIAC championship since the formation of the new league in 1950. Coach Joe Cogdal's hill and dalers ran only two points behind the two Michigan members of the league in the annual conference meet at DeKalb. ISNU also took a strong second in the State college run at Wheaton.

A group of six harriers gave Cogdal the best balanced squad in recent years with Capt. Frank Dalla-Riva, Lynn Viseur, Jim Tyree, Jim Bryant, Cecil Wilson, Dave Shinneman, and Joe Wanner making up the unit.

The Redbird dalers scored dual victories over Monmouth, Western Illinois, Beloit, Eastern Illinois, Southern Illinois, and Bradley while losing to Northern Illinois and Wheaton.

Alumni's cars parked in row after row, the sound of chatter as old friends meet and new ones are made, the scent of autumn leaves in the fall breeze, the brisk air against happy faces, the taste of fresh popcorn at the big game—these scenes all signify the big weekend, our Homecoming weekend.

Winding its way from the Cage to the bonfire on South Campus, the traditional snake dance officially opened the 1956 Homecoming. Amidst the glowing embers of the bonfire the burning enthusiasm of the cheering crowd permeated the air as President Robert G. Bone, the football captains, and the coaches expressed their desire and confidence that our team would do its best to capture that important game with the Hurons of Eastern Michigan.

Victory

Elsewhere in Normal more confidence was being expressed in the ISNU Redbirds through the vehicle of decorated houses and dormitories. The arduous preparation of decorations was brought to a climax when the judges announced that Walker Hall won first place in the dormitory division with the theme "408 for Illinois State." Off-campus victors were the girls at 307 West Ash, who submitted the theme "ISNU Train of Progress."

Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights University Theatre presented "The Solid Gold Cadillac," a satire on big business. In this comedy, a middle-aged Cinderella, Mrs. Partridge, triumphed over four ugly corporation directors, and, much to her own surprise and obviously to theirs, displaced the directors and acquired the leadership for herself. "The Solid Gold Cadillac" proved to be a trunkful of solid gold laughs and a gilt-edged happy time for all Homecoming audiences.

Saturday, the day of fun and fatigue, commenced with numerous organizational breakfasts followed by the Homecoming parade. Led by the ISNU marching bands, the parade was a procession of beauty, humor, and originality. Over twenty-five floats participated, the Centennial class winning first place with the theme "100 Years of Progress," which was depicted by replicas of Old Main and the Student Union.

The loveliest picture in the parade was Midge Stewart, who reigned as the 1956 Homecoming Queen. Midge and her attendants, Arlene Urquhart, June Jochums, Louise Gwaltney, and Sandy Nelson, were presented in a three-car cortege driven by members of the "N" Club.

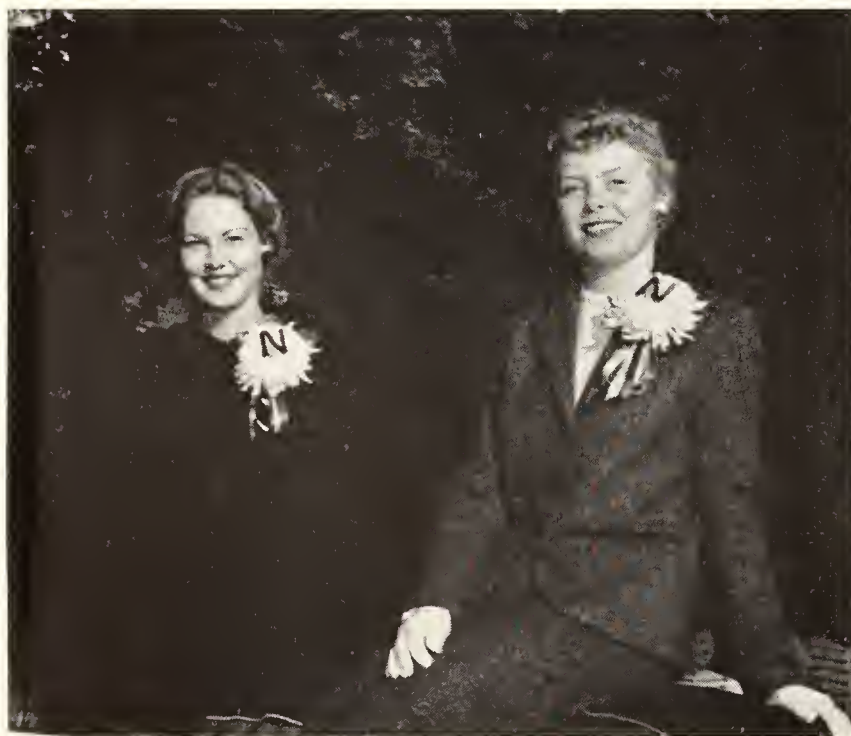

Saturday afternoon climaxed this weekend when ISNU triumphed over the Hurons from Eastern Michigan with a score of 22-7. A capacity crowd reacted enthusiastically when Eastern Michigan lost the ball on the Normal 18 yard line and Normal marched 82 yards. John Thomas threw a four-yard pass to Mike Hundley and scored with 42 seconds left to play in the first quarter.

During the half-time lapse the ISNU marching bands, directed by Mr. Arden Vance, presented a musical interpretation of "What's New On Campus." The Queen and her court were also presented to the spectators at this time. The last quarter of the game clinched a tremendous win for ISNU when Herman Carroll passed the Michigan team from his own 41 yard line after a fumble recovery to the Normal 23, and then ran to the 5 yard line when nobody was open for a pass. Bob Kosanovich went over from the 4 yard line on an end around play, and Doug Wilkins' kick was good, thus ending the game and adding to the success of Normal's Homecoming.

Saturday evening McCormick Gymnasium was the home of the gala dance, "Autumn Leaves." Multi-colored foliage formed a false ceiling and decorative shocks of corn enhanced the festive mood of this gay occasion. During the intermission of the dance, Don Magee officially crowned Midge Stewart Homecoming Queen of 1956.

Sunday everyone had an empty feeling. Alumni were leaving, probably not to return for another year. Students were taking down the house decorations, cleaning McCormick Field, and remembering that classes did start again the next day. No matter whether one was a student or an alumnus, Homecoming at ISNU was over. But it was a big and wonderful affair!

Jesters Present . . .

The scent of make-up, the flutter of costumes, the last-minute fears of forgetting lines, and the feeling of unity before the first act of a play all came into focus the evenings of December 1 and 2, 1956, when Jesters presented Thieves' Carnival, by Jean Anouilh, as its annual winter presentation.

The combination of French humor, dramatic staging, and effective portrayals entertained the audiences in Capen auditorium for over two hours. Behind a mask of satirical fantasy, the variously motivated characters enacted a play that was well-paced and delightfully presented. The drama was directed by Miss Mabel Clare Allen and her assistant, Barbara Lowery. The setting, designed by Roger Gottschalk, added to the spirit of the play, blending in with the period properties and costumes. The Jesters' motto, "All for one and one for all," proved effective, as was borne out by this production.

As the audience in Capen Auditorium rose to hear the combined Women's Chorus, Men's Glee Club, and University Choir join in the rendition of the "Hallelujah Chorus" from Handel's Messiah, the Christmas season at Illinois State Normal University, with its pervading Christmas spirit, had truly begun. In the busy weeks that followed, a multitude of familiar carols resounded from the loud speakers of the Administration Building and encompassed the entire campus. After much elaborate and secretive planning, the dormitory residents unveiled a variety of glittering decorations which added to the attractiveness of the Christmas campus. Special guests who were invited to the holiday dances at the dormitories were caught in the magic spell woven by a combination of soft lights, shimmering formals, and sparkling music. The new tradition of the tree-lighting ceremony was initiated when the giant evergreen in front of the Student Union was decorated with multi-colored lights. Santa Claus then arrived to toss peppermint candy canes to the students and to lead them in singing the joyous carols of the season. In the Union ballroom, members of the faculty and of the student body enjoyed the Middle English Yuletide custom known as a madrigal dinner. Selected singers in colorful costumes sang a cappella madrigals to announce the beginning of each course of a sumptuous repast. A final and more serious note was in the form of a Christmas service on the Sunday afternoon before classes ended. During the week that followed, the Women's League and the YWCA also emphasized the religious aspect of the season by initiating opportunities for Noontide Meditations. Thus, ISNU students who scattered homeward to spend the ensuing holidays with their families and friends already possessed a rich legacy of Christmas spirit and joy.

The Crystal Ball

Unsuspecting guests were whisked as if by rocket ship to a world of the future as the Art Club presented its annual Beaux Arts Ball. Well known for choosing unusual themes, the Art Club outdid even itself as it presented its futuristic look into ISNU life in 2057.

An enormous glistening white paper sculpture in the center of the floor lent itself to provide an imaginative air as it depicted an extremely modernistic ISNU building. Also adding to the illusion of ISNU 2057 were the large murals of situations which would be ideal on a college campus. The Dreamtimers were set against a panoramic backdrop of vivid colors representing the imaginative campus of the future, and were flanked by two futuristic Fell Gates.

The decorations, which were planned by chairmen Marilyn La Fond and Ron Hefler, cast an air of the unusual and also served as an excellent background for the people who came in costumes to carry out the theme of the dance, "The Crystal Ball."

To join in the year-long anniversary, the four classes, U Club, and Women's League united their efforts in the sponsorship of this long awaited dance. Under the general chairmanship of Mary Ann Galloway and John White, the various committees worked along their individual lines until the day of the Ball when all joined in to put the final touches in place for the dance which celebrated our one-hundredth birthday.

Tying for fourth place in the IIAC was the ISNU varsity team, which finished this season with a 5-7 league record. After the last game, March 4, in an NCAA district playoff game with Evansville College at Evansville, Indiana, it was determined that the Redbirds had a 14-13 record for the 1956-57 season.

Marberry's 442 points in fifteen games topped the individual scoring for the year. Freshman Tony Cadle was second with 385 points in 27 games for a 14.3 average, while Dave Schertz (12.6), Art Buesking (10.6), John Zuzevich (10.3), and Gene Parker Lawlis, Essie Robinson, Dave Divan, Rich Bennett, Jerry Odell, Chuck Brannan, Rex Parker, and Jim Costigan were other varsity performers. The squad honored Schertz by naming him as most valuable player for the season while Parker Lawlis and Dave Schertz were named as honorary co-captains for the year. Gene Jontry won the Charles V. Hall free-throw cup with a phenomenal 94 per cent mark at the line, scoring 47 times out of 50 attempts.

1881 Points— Highest of Century

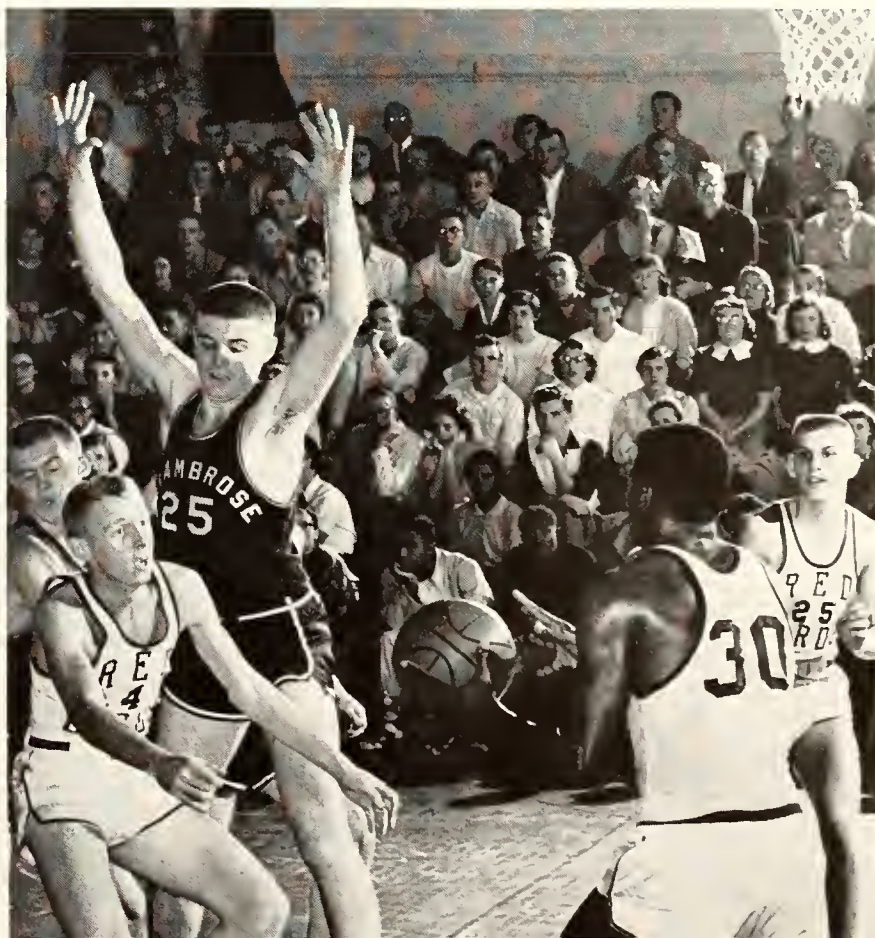

The basketball season of the Centennial year at ISNU will be remembered as the year that Fred Marberry established a new all-time individual scoring total of 1881 points, as well as the year of the flashy red, white, and blue suits. Although not eligible for the second semester of his fourth year, Fred will be remembered in ISNU sports history as one of the all-time Redbird stars because of his 22.1 point-per-game average for his career of 85 games for Coach "Pim" Goff. He was named as the most valuable player in the IIAC during his sophomore and junior years and ranked among the top five scorers in the nation for the first half of the 1956-57 season.

The basketball "B's" wound up a successful 10-2 season on the hardwood with wins over Wesleyan, Northern, and Eastern during a three-day period. Coach Warren Crews' men lost only to DePaul and the Palmer Chiropractic team during the season, with other victories being counted over Roanoke, LaSalle-Peru-Oglesby Junior College, Springfield Junior College, and the Western reserves. Team leaders, along with Guenther, were Carlos Wyatt, Wayne Hammerton, Jerry Odell, and Larry Heise. Gene Jontry scored 120 points in six games for Crews before being moved up to the varsity unit. The "B's" had a .491 field goal average, counting 1053 points to their opponents' 857 in the 12 games.

Aquamen

The dual victory over the Wesleyan swimmers was about the only bright spot in the season for Coach Bob Pomrenke's Redbird tankmen. The squad was riddled by ineligibility at the semester mark and was not able to win another meet after that time. Chuck Brooks, free style specialist, was the leading point maker while Jim Wall, Jim Kijewski, Pat Patterson, Bert Winterbottom, and Pat Dowling were other regulars for Pomrenke through the season.

Women's Intramurals

An opportunity to participate in sports is provided by WRA through its intramural program. The team membership is proportionately arranged so that the physical education students do not dominate the teams; therefore, all interested girls are given an equal chance to prove their ability. Men's Intramurals

The men's intramural program at ISNU operates in close co-operation with the Health and Physical Education department, but it provides a wider range of activities for a greater number of students. Activities such as volleyball, golf, table tennis, swimming, football, and bowling provide a close correlation with the aims of the departmental program in promoting skill, competitive sport, and good sportsmanship among the participants. Pat Dowling took first place in the free style and backstroke; Bill Hughes emerged victorious in the butterfly and breaststroke; and Robert Basarich won the golf title.

Bureau of Appointments

A telephone call or a message from the Bureau of Appointments leads many graduating students to the first teaching positions of their careers. However, before the graduates can apply for these positions, they must submit their credentials, those applications that must be done in septet, complete with recommendations.

The Bureau under the direction of Dr. Harold E. Gibson has the two-fold task of helping students secure teaching positions and of aiding school administrators in finding teachers for vacancies throughout the country. Any person who has attended Illinois State Normal University for more than one semester has access to this service free of charge. Every graduate has good reason for appreciating this very essential service given by the Bureau of Appointments.

Dr. Harold Gibson assures Jack Dickerson and Donna Kooi that there is a position for them.

Founders' Day

On February 18, 1957, Illinois State Normal University celebrated its 100th birthday. Officially opening this day was the Founders' Day Convocation held in Capen Auditorium. During the course of the assembly, the presentation of the members of the Teachers College Board was made to the audience. Dr. Chris De Young reviewed the events of the Centennial Class, and William McKnight, an alumnus, spoke on topics appropriate for the occasion.

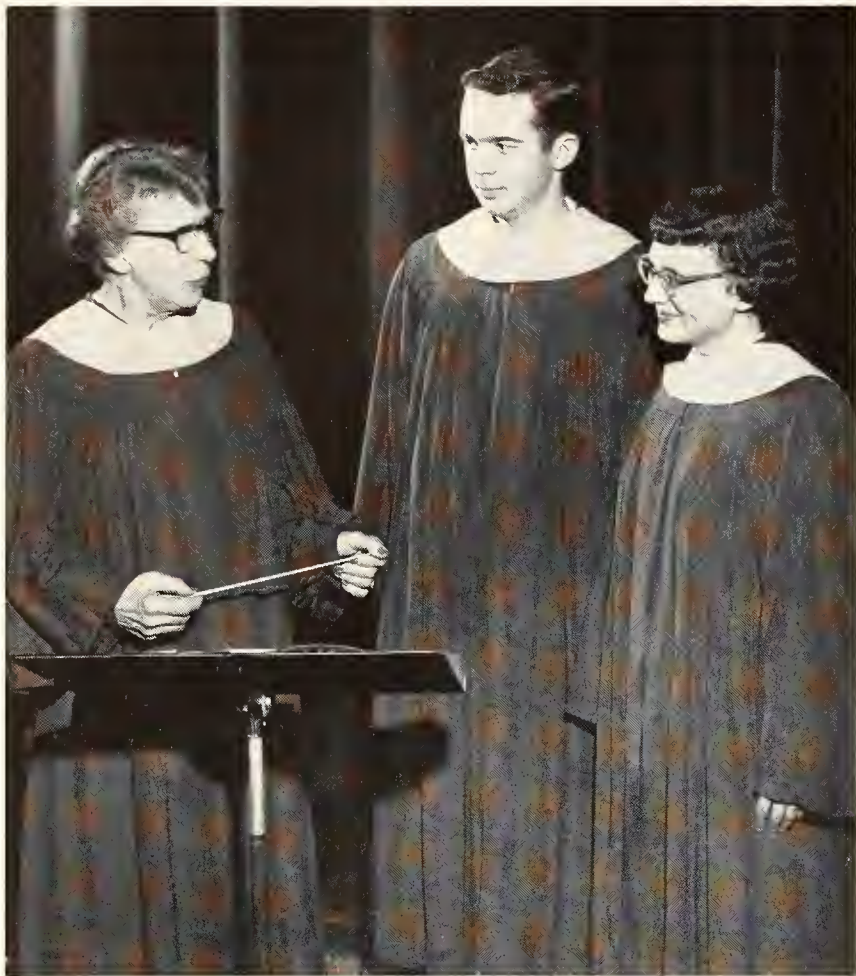

The highlight of the day was at the Founders' Day Banquet when President Robert Bone and Jack Stoltz, president of the ISNU Alumni Association, blew out the one hundred candles on ISNU's birthday cake. After the cake ceremony, Mrs. Louise Scott Campbell of the class of 1884, Miss Mary Keys of the class of 1907, Thomas Barger of the class of 1932, and Donald McHenry, a member of the Centennial Class, each gave a verbal picture of ISNU at the time of his attendance. The featured speaker for the occasion was Governor of Illinois William G. Stratton, who commended ISNU on its accomplishments in the field of Illinois education during the last century.

A special Centennial Program commemorating one hundred years of music was one of the chief offerings of the University Choir, in co-operation with the other music groups on campus. Such selections as "Wagon Wheels," and "Hi Lilli, Hi Lo" characterized the transition from the traditional to the modern. Under the direction of Dr. Emma Knudson, the Choir has a membership of approximately ninety music enthusiasts, who practice each Tuesday and Thursday afternoons. Such favorites as "Colleen," "The Resistless Tide," and "Ye Banks and Braes" demonstrate the variety of Choir material mastered.

As a unique activity, early in the year the entire Choir participated in the Music Education National Conference. The Choir performed certain techniques of voice blending in its role as an experimental group.

Officers included President Alene Berry, Vice-President Ron Beer, Secretary-Treasurer Nancy Chiddix, and Publicity Chairman Ray Rebuck.

"Brothers, Sing On"

In white coats with a red carnation boutonniere, the men of the Glee Club run up to the stage and burst into song—and the Homecoming Weekend has again begun. This annual performance also opened a year full of activities for the group of enthusiastic singers. Each Monday and Thursday evening the organization meets to practice a repertoire, varied both in mood and style of songs and presentation. Some of the familiar but novel songs heard throughout the year were "Brothers, Sing On," "Rock of My Soul," and "The Evening Pastoral." From October to January the group made six television appearances on WBLN-TV. In the spring came the two-day tour to several down-state schools where the Glee Club directed by Dr. Harlan Peithman presented many assembly programs.

Strike Up the Band

The spring semester found numerous engagements on the agenda of the ISNU Concert Band. Besides presenting an assembly program to the ISNU students, the Concert Band took a tour in March to Greenville, Sandoval, Vandalia, and Highland to perform for high school assemblies. They offered a spring concert as their part in the Music Department's Festival of Music in May. The Concert Band, directed by Arden L. Vance, also contributed some of their talent to make up the Circus and the Pep Bands.

Sitting prim and erect, the Illinois State Normal University Band await the call to music to display its talents.

Entertainment Series

Satisfaction for all types of music enthusiasts was guaranteed through this year's Entertainment Series, which included the progressive jazz of the Dave Brubeck Quartet, the folk songs of Dyer-Bennett, and the chamber music of the Festival Quartet. The diversified program also presented interpretive dancer Jose Limon, monologist Ruth Draper, and "The Best of Steinbeck." Responsible for bringing the artists to the campus is the Entertainment Board under the chairmanship of Miss Isabelle Terrill.

Four distinguished artists, Szymon Goldberg, violinist; Victor Babin, pianist; Nikolai Braudan, cellist; and William Primrose, violist, composed the Festival Quartet, which presented an evening of Brahms and Mozart.

A Century of Dance

Dances characteristic of American life from 1860 to the present and glimpses of future choreography were portrayed as Orchesis members whirled their way through "A Century of Dance." The marching ladies of the Civil War, a typical exercise class of the 1880's, the Charleston of the "Roaring Twenties," and dances employing three dimensional forms of movement were some of the nineteen original compositions on the evening's program.

Spring Carnival

A mood of festivity pervaded McCormick Gymnasium the night of March 23 when the Central Board of Women's League sponsored the annual Spring Carnival. Twenty-six organizations on campus entered booths which exhibited originality, color, and creativity through such themes as Bartonville Jail, Take a Trip Around the World, the Marriage Booth, and the Inter-gym Telegraph Services. A half-hour talent show was held at which faculty and student judges selected the Four Roses plus Three from Fell Hall as first place winners.

Sweetheart Ball

The ISNU men's choice for the Centennial Sweetheart was Julie Danahay, a sophomore in biology from Bloomington. Julie and her court, Donna Miller, Nancy Bates, Doris Carmichael, Sheila Dennis, and Lorena Ballenger, made their appearance through paper-covered red and white frames. The girls were accompanied by members of the sponsoring group, the University Club. Rod Hartnett, president, presented Queen Danahay with a bouquet of red roses, a silver loving cup, and an engraved bracelet.

Music for the Sweetheart Ball was provided by Johnny Rinaldo and his orchestra, featuring vocalist Peggy Warren. The special guests attending the dance were President and Mrs. Bone, Dean Anna Keaton, Dean and Mrs. Richard Hulet, Mr. R. H. Linkins, Dr. and Mrs. Norton, Dr. and Mrs. Gimmetad, and Dr. and Mrs. Holmes.

Keeping Pace

Coach Joe Cogdal's 1956 thinclads finished the season with a 5-3 dual record and placed sixth in the IIAC meet held at Mt. Pleasant, Michigan. The harriers, led by co-captains Merle Anderson and Wally Delhotal, scored victories over Chanute Air Base, Millikin, Northern, Western, and Wesleyan. The team showed its improvement over the previous season by copping fourth in the state meet at Macomb and then placing third in the Elmhurst relays. Rod Bonser was one of the outstanding members of the track team, breaking several school records in the shot put, while Fred Marberry, running the 220, 440, and 880, was the leading point getter for the cindermen.

Off the Net

Illinois State Normal's year reign as IIAC tennis champion ended in 1956 when the netmen placed second behind Eastern Michigan in the meet held at Mt. Pleasant, Michigan. Jim Hurst and Pat Grant won individual titles in the meet and joined forces to cop the number two doubles crown. On the whole, the Redbird racketmen enjoyed a highly successful season, winning 12 out of the 15 scheduled dual matches. Jerry Vankus was captain of the 1956 team and alternated with Jay Meitzler in the all-important number one position.

Sliding In

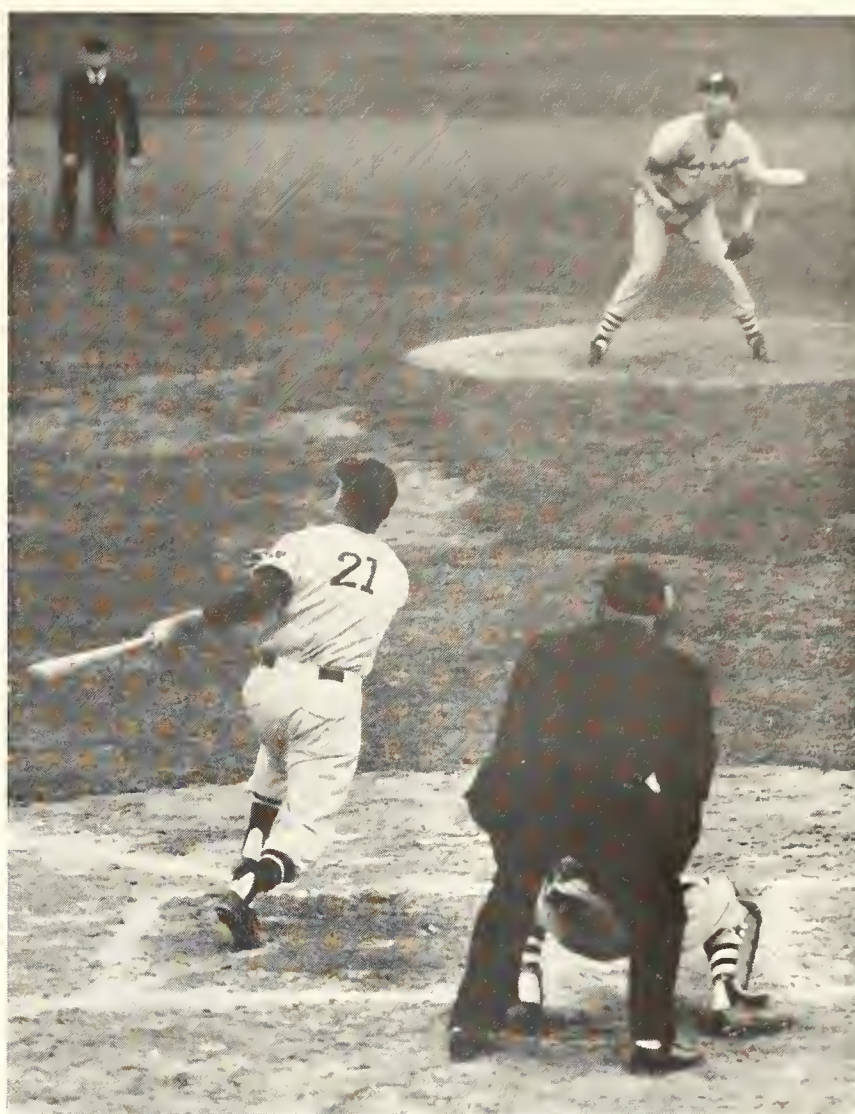

The 1956 baseball team was a surprise to all Redbird fans. Coach Harold Frye started the season with only four of his regulars from the 1955 IIAC championship nine. Despite this shortage of veterans, he fashioned a team which sailed through the 1956 schedule with 18 wins and 10 losses and won ISNU its third straight conference championship. The team started out slowly, making numerous mistakes in fielding, but as the season wore on the play improved and the Redbirds won their last eleven games with comparative ease.

Tom Hodgson watches Bob Riggenschach slide past Southern's catcher in a thrilling triumph at McCormick Field.

Les Hellemann and Bob Riggenschach, co-captains of the Redbird nine, were the key players in the battle for the IIAC championship. Both players were clutch hitters and Hellemann ended the season with three new conference marks to his credit. A sensational batting average of .477 along with a runs-batted-in total of 21 and a base hit total of 21 were key reasons why he was chosen the most valuable player in the IIAC.

The team itself was one of the most outstanding hitting teams Normal has ever had. The Redbird congregation finished over-all play with a phenomenal .294 average and set a new conference record with an unbelievable .340 mark.

At the close of the season, four players were selected on the all-star conference team. Norman Miller, ISNU's top pitcher; Les Hellemann, outfielder; Bob Riggenschach, third baseman; and Phil Hogan, catcher, received first string honors, and Wendell Good, hard hitting centerfielder, was chosen as a member of the second team.

Redbird pitcher Damon Brown is shown hitting an infield fly to Lewis' third baseman while Ray Fedo, Flyer hurler, looks on. Normal won the game by an 11-2 score.

Norman Jenkins, ISNU second baseman, is out at the plate in an attempt to add another run in the first game of a twin bill with Southern. The Redbirds copped the doubleheader by scores of 5-2 and 6-4.

An important run is thwarted by all-conference catcher Phil Hogan in the second game of a doubleheader with Northern. Normal came from behind in the ninth to win 10-9.

In the Rough

ISNU's golf team, coached by the school's athletic director Howard Hancock, finished the 1956 season with an 8-8 record. Bill Brick, a freshman, paced the Redbird divoters with a 10-2 mark in dual meet competition following the pre-season trip south. Brick carded two 69's, two 71's, a 72, and two 73's in the record book and went over the 80 mark only three times all spring. Jerry Meidel was the captain of the 1956 golfers, and Bill Semister was elected as the 1957 leader.

After seeing ISNU in action, many decide that, starting next fall, they will be a part of this campus life.

de la Mer

An underwater atmosphere with all of its elegance and enchantment pervaded McCormick Gymnasium the night of Saturday, May 5. The event was the annual Sophomore Cotillion, this year entitled de la Mer. Through effective lighting the ceiling became the surface of the water, reflecting the colors of the sky. Surrounding the dancers were murals of sea scenes and one wall was transformed into an underwater shelf. Music radiated from a coral reef. The Cotillion royalty, Kathy Springer and Tom Patrick, reigned from thrones of iridescent sea shells. Refreshments were served in a replica of a wrecked ship filled with treasure chests, lanterns, and maps. The mysterious but fascinating decor made this dance truly "of the sea."

Humor's Heyday

The annual Stunt Show sponsored by the U Club can always be relied upon to begin the last big weekend of the year successfully. Now only does this production supply an evening of superior entertainment, but it also provides an atmosphere of cooperation and competition on campus for several weeks preceding the show.

Last year the Fell Hall stunt entitled "Oscarama!" captured first place, and the Jesters took second honors. Perhaps the most humorous act in the show was the depiction of college life in the 1920s, narrated by Mr. George Barford and enacted by the faculty members. Though this stunt is non-competitive, it is asked to return each year to act as a climax to the ever-popular stunt show.

Moonlight on Tara

The veranda of a southern plantation, magnolia trees in blossom, the whisper of a soft southern breeze carrying a low sweet note of music, and the shadows of dancing couples in formal attire drifting across the floor provided a scene resembling the ante-bellum South, but was the setting for the Junior-Senior Prom, "Moonlight on Tara." Outstanding Seniors of The Centennial Class

To honor the members of the Senior Class who have excelled in extra-curricular activities, character, and scholastic achievements, the Student Council again this year formed a committee to set up the criteria for such selections and to choose the recipients. In order to be eligible for this honor, a student must have been a full-time student enrolled in the University during his senior year, and he must have earned twenty-four hours of credit at ISNU prior to the senior year.

Seated: Kenneth Janda, Joan Burkart, Ronald Slaek, Pat Stange, Jeanne Charlton, and Robert Leach.
Standing: Barbara Liehty, Delores Aeosta, Abbie Ackerman, Margaret Davenport, Bethsebe Hoskens, Marcia Lester, Faye Felehner, Marilynn Lesmeister, and Jack Dickerson.

January, June, or August graduates were eligible for awards in 1957. The graduate must have been an active participant in extra-curricular activities and have maintained a grade point average of 2.75. Those seniors selected this year, however, did not have a scholastic average of less than a "B."

This year the "Outstanding Senior" awards went to 3 per cent of the graduating class. Those selected to receive the award were Jeanne Charlton, Joan Burkart, Marcia Lester, Faye Felchner, Kenneth Janda, Marilynn Lesmeister, Delores Acosta, Abbie Ackerman, Bethsebe Hoskens, Barbara Lichty, Margaret Davenport, Jack Dickerson, Ronald Slack, Robert Leach, and Pat Stange.

Each "Outstanding Senior" was presented with a plaque for his achievement, which token was given at a tea sponsored by the faculty. The names of the award recipients were also added to the "Outstanding Senior Roll," which is kept in a leather-bound book on display during Commencement Week.

The various methods for finding books at Milner Library are explained by Rose Taplin to Gladys Warren, Theria Jackson, Robert Abbott, Lucy Ward, and the sponsor, Miss Eunice Speer.

Alpha Beta Alpha

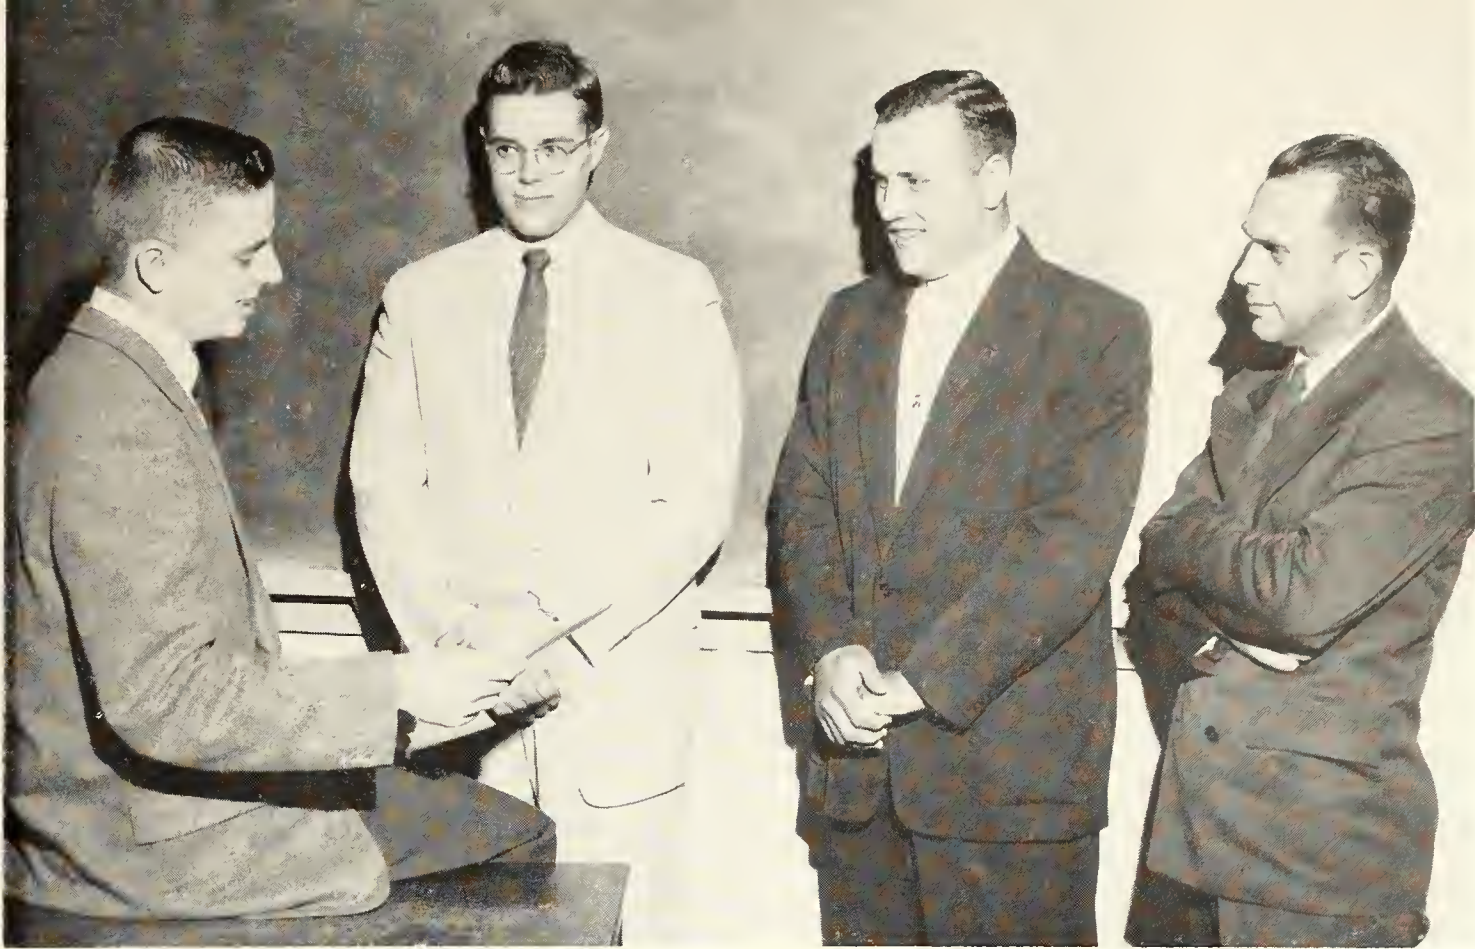

The inside work at Milner Library was the subject of several of the meetings of Alpha Beta Alpha, the national honorary undergraduate library fraternity. The year's activities included a visit to the state library at Springfield, Illinois, participation in the national Alpha Beta Alpha convention at Terre Haute, Indiana, in April, and a visit to the Illinois Pupils' Reading Circle near Bloomington. Through all of its activities, Alpha Beta Alpha carried out its purpose, to encourage young men and women to become librarians.

Alpha Delta

The old Pigeon magazine came out of dormancy this year when Alpha Delta, the honorary journalistic fraternity, sold the remaining copies to students on campus. Other activities carried on by the organization consisted of a spring picnic for the newly initiated members and lectures by noted journalistic figures. Through its monthly meetings and various activities, the group carried out its purpose of establishing a spirit of friendship and cooperation among the journalists at various schools. The sponsor was Mr. Victor Gimmetstad.

Discussing the future sale of the remaining copies of the Pigeon magazine are Midge Stewart, secretary; Virginia Stahr, vice-president; Marge Miller, treasurer, and Ken Janda, president of Alpha Delta.

The plans for the current year are outlined by Bob Owens, secretary, to the executive council of Alpha Phi Omega which consists of Vice-President Bob Hardin, President James Haycraft, and Sponsor Mr. Harry Jackson.

Alpha Phi Omega

The members of Alpha Phi Omega, the honorary service fraternity, with the aid of sponsors Dr. C. E. Horton, Dr. Donald T. Ries, Mr. Harry Jackson, and Dr. L. W. Miller, carried out an annual program of service. In furthering the objectives of service to the University, to the community, and to Scouting, the group led by President James Haycraft, Vice-president Robert Hardin, Secretary Robert Owens, and Treasurer Nick Stroff ushered at University programs, such as the Entertainment Series, and guided prospective students on College Day.

Alpha Tau Alpha

An annual event sponsored by Alpha Tau Alpha, the national agriculture education fraternity, is the Holbert Medal Banquet. At this time, Dr. Clyde Hudelson presents the medal to the student who has achieved the highest score on the battery of tests previously given. The monthly meetings consist of talks by speakers such as the Dean of Agriculture from the University of Illinois and a representative of the United States Department of Agriculture. Mr. John Green served as sponsor during the past year.

Phyllis Spalenka explains a technique used in the drawing of the human form to the other art club officers, Adrienne Oblouk, Diane DuBois, Rita Rogers, Marilyn Lafond, and Anne Wahrer.

Art Club

Anyone interested in art was invited to attend the opening Art Club meeting of the year, which was a barbecue supper held at the home of the sponsor, Mr. George Barford. The November meeting consisted of an initiation for new members, who had to go through the trials of both struggling young artists and initiates to the club. Shortly after the year opened the members began to plan their big project, the Beaux Arts Ball, this year named "The Crystal Ball." Anne Wahrer, Rita Rogers, Marilyn Lafond, and Diane DuBois were officers.

Blackfriars

Through slapstick and satire the Blackfriars exhibit talent and originality in the annual Blackfriar show, this year held April 5 and 6. At this show the all male organization carried out its purpose, to produce humorous musical productions of the highest possible calibre. With the proceeds from this annual production, the Friars awarded fifty dollar scholarships to four deserving men on campus. During 1956-57 the organization was directed by Don Blatner, Jack Bell, Ron Schultz, John Wilson, Sam Baseler, Ken Fry, and Jim Seay.

Business Education Club

The excitement concerning house decorations which reigned throughout Normal on the Friday night of Homecoming was due to the early planning of the Business Education Club. This organization designated the divisions, encouraged the entries, chose the judges, and distributed the prizes. In addition to this work, the club entered a float and received sixth place. A spring and fall picnic, a Christmas party, and joint meetings with Pi Omega Pi and the Commerce Club from Wesleyan served to provide a busy year for the Business Education Club.

Canterbury Club

An interesting analysis of the educational system of Liberia and a stimulating talk on the customs and religion of Burma highlighted the program of the Canterbury Club. This group, sponsored by Dr. A. W. Watterson and Father Bowman of St. Matthews Episcopal Church, also viewed slides of foreign religious architecture and studied the tenets of the Episcopal faith and their relation to student life. The officers for 1956-57 were Judy Darby, president; Muriel Heady, vice-president; Joyce Green, secretary; and Nancy Sutcliffe, treasurer.

Phyllis Lec, Jackie Cannon, Andy Purnell, Miss Helen Marshall, and Jack Murry make plans for the spring lecture to be given by a representative from the Christian Science Church, Boston, Massachusetts.

Christian Science Organization

Weekly meetings held to study the Bible and science and health as outlined by Mary Baker Eddy are the methods the Christian Science Organization uses to carry forth its purpose of uniting Christian Science students on ISNU's campus. This group holds a fall reception for new students and a Homecoming breakfast for alumni. Once a year a lecture is given, through the sponsorship of this organization, by a member of the Board of Lectureship of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, of Boston, Massachusetts. Miss Helen Marshall is the group's advisor.

Elementary Club

A picnic to which little sisters were invited started the year successfully for Elementary Club members. Officers Jo Bidner, Joan Snyder, Anne Moberly, and Marlene Delany worked with committee members and the club sponsors, Dr. Helen Nance and Dr. Jeanette Vanderpol, to prepare and carry out the year's activities: pom pom sales for the Homecoming weekend, a Christmas party for the Victory Hall boys, a spring banquet in May, participation in the Spring Carnival, and the sponsorship of the first State American Childhood Education Convention in March.

Chuck Leech and Barbara Fann practice a portion of a play to be presented at the next English Club meeting, while Bill Hulse, Eleanor Eastwood, and Miss Henline, the sponsor, listen critically.

English Club

The annual fall picnic marked the opening of another active year for the English Club, currently sponsored by Miss Ruth Henline. Immediately plans were made to attend several plays at the University of Illinois, among them The Beggars' Opera and Macbeth. In October the organization worked on a float for the Homecoming parade. November brought a hayride, March, a booth at the Spring Carnival, and June featured the picnic. Presentations of plays, book reviews, and visiting speakers comprised the monthly meetings of the English Club.

Foreign Language Club

A Christmas party which featured carols sung in four different languages was one of the highlights of the Foreign Language Club's program. Other phases of their agenda included a discussion of "Politics the World Over," a talk on language customs in Indo-China, and a description of Germany by foreign student Reinhardt Richter. The organization met each month to provide a means for professional growth for students interested in a foreign language and to furnish opportunities for experience which will benefit the prospective teachers.

Future Teachers of America

The McMurry Chapter of Future Teachers of America, a professional organization, this year celebrated the tenth anniversary of its founding on the ISNU campus. Under the sponsorship of Miss Ruth Huggins, Miss Elizabeth Russell, and Dr. Leo Eastman, the organization encouraged the establishment of high school FTA chapters through student panels. In April this group played host to the state convention. Other activities undertaken by the FTA included the construction of a Homecoming float and a Spring Carnival booth.

Gamma Phi

March brought the culmination of all of the hard and long work of the members of Gamma Phi, because at this time of year the annual Gamma Phi Circus came to McCormick Gym. Later in the year, the group went on a tour to present the circus for high schools throughout the state. The purpose of the fraternity is to encourage gymnastics among the students of the university and to promote gymnastic excellence in the individual members of the student body and faculty by election to membership. Mr. Arley F. Gillett served as the sponsor.

The techniques and skills necessary in the mastery of gymnastic achievement are pointed out by Mr. Arley Gillett, sponsor, to Pat Patterson, Ardene White, Margaret Menne, and Ron Tinsley.

Bob Jager demonstrates to Elizabeth Ashman, Harriet Hendrickson, Gene Gallion, and Dr. Wallace McIntyre how modern air and water routes link the nations of the northern hemisphere.

Gamma Theta Upsilon

A field trip to Mammoth Cave, Kentucky, during Easter vacation highlighted the annual program of Gamma Theta Upsilon, the professional geography society under the sponsorship of Dr. Wallace McIntyre. The group also organized a Homecoming banquet and a spring picnic besides having several interesting persons, such as a representative of Rand McNally, speak at the monthly meetings. The purpose of the organization is to further professional interest in geography and to strengthen training in geography by discussing subjects not covered in the classroom.

Home Economics Club

To encourage fellowship among students of home economics and members of the faculty and to promote home economics in high schools are the purposes of the Home Economics Club. A traditional project of the organization is the presentation of a Christmas basket to a needy family. During the rest of the year the group sponsored a style show displaying the garments made by the club members, and this year the meetings included a talk on home life in Burma by faculty members from Burma, and a movie and discussion on china and sterling dinnerware.

A deadline to meet, a picture mounted wrong, copy four lines short—whatever the problems, the Index staff has faced them all in creating the 1957 Centennial Index. With a common purpose and hope to make this yearbook one of the outstanding annuals in ISNU's century, the Index staff has worked diligently each week cutting, pasting, typing, writing, and filing. This year the Index office made its new home on the third floor of the Student Union with increased space and facilities. Ron Blake, editor and photographer, and Marge Miller, assistant editor, were aided by Ron Cook, business manager; Adrienne Oblouk, literary editor; and Doug Ploss, art editor.

Industrial Arts Club

Student communication on the ISNU campus depends heavily on the work done by the Industrial Arts Club in the publication of the Student Directory. Each year in the fall, the members of this organization compile and print the necessary information in a booklet sold to students for a reasonable price. In addition to this main project, the group sends a representative to the annual American Vocational Association Conference, which this year was held in St. Louis. The Industrial Arts Club is under the sponsorship of Mr. Roger D. Blomgren.

Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship

Four o'clock on Wednesday afternoons, the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship met to carry out its objectives, to deepen the spiritual lives of students and faculty through Bible study, prayer, and Christian Fellowship. Twice a month on Friday night the organization held meetings which were open to the public, and at which they presented various guest speakers. Also, each month a student served as leader of devotions at the Home Sweet Home Mission in Bloomington. Dr. G. Harlowe Evans acted as sponsor.

Striving to add religious inspiration to the lives of others as well as to their own are J. Hines, M. Hustead, S. Swanson, J. Burgess, J. Maxey, F. Rusk, G. Enderson, J. Bloodworth, D. Summers, S. Cowger, and Dr. Evans.

Mr. William White, the sponsor of Iota Lambda Sigma, shows Roy Peacock, Robert Glaser, and Robert Monke samples of linotype used in the printing of class schedules for 1957.

Iota Lambda Sigma

Composed of students who have attained a B average in industrial arts courses is the national honorary industrial arts fraternity, Iota Lambda Sigma. Under the direction of Mr. William White, the organization sponsored a May banquet at which time the newcomers were initiated. The monthly meetings consisted of films and lectures, such as the February program, which featured the supervisor of vocational education in Bloomington, who spoke on the problems confronting beginning industrial arts teachers.

Jesters

Wielding a paint brush on a flat, hunting down rare properties, or just changing scenery between acts can be fun when everyone joins in. All Jesters know that backstage work as well as acting is enjoyable. As a group the Jesters produce the annual winter play, two College Day plays, and a stunt in the spring stunt show. In addition to these productions for the entire university, the organization sponsors closed trips to see noted stage plays. The closed monthly meetings consist of parties, picnics, and play readings by members of the group.

The Jesters exploit their ability for cleverness and originality in make up and costume off-stage as well as on, as is illustrated by Donna Schmidt, Bob Findley, Mr. Eric Biekley, Jackie Bergagna, and Sam Baseler.

Miss Mary Webb discusses the sale of Student Union notepaper, the year's main financial project, with Janice Esmond, Jeanne Charlton, Betty Meador, Phyllis Winkler, Annette Swichtenberg, and Rosemary Shaw.

Kappa Delta Epsilon

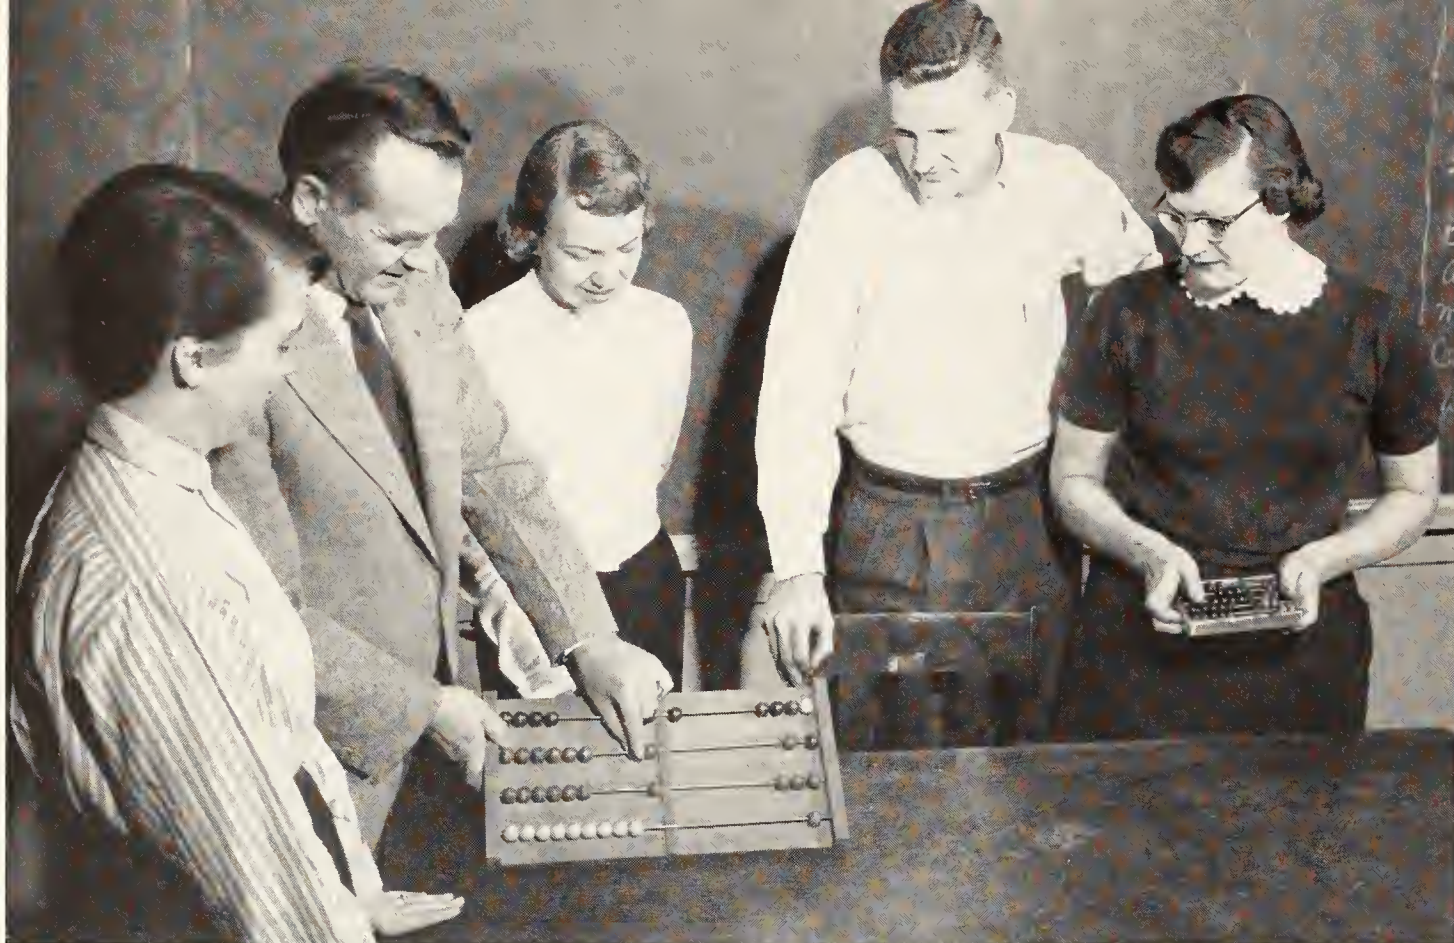

Clothing bought for a needy little girl, favors and gifts for children in the hospital, a fun night, a Founder's Day Banquet, and several guest speakers to carry out the theme "The Teacher and Her World" formed the program and projects of Kappa Delta Epsilon this year. Under the guidance of Miss Mary Webb and Dr. Helen Nance, and the leadership of Jeanne Charlton, Janice Esmond, Annette Swichtenberg, Betty Meador, Abbie Ackerman, Phyllis Winkler, and Rosemary Shaw, the members grew toward their goal: promoting the cause of education.

Kappa Delta Pi

Kappa Delta Pi, an honorary professional organization, lists as one of its objectives the fostering of high standards of preparation in teacher training. Thus, in the past year, the society, with the aid of sponsors Bernice Frey and Francis Belshe, planned a tutoring service and met jointly with other professional campus groups. Officers Barbara Dunn, Alice Weizsaecker, Jeanne Charlton, and Suzanne Albright led the group in the preparation and organization of the regional meeting of Kappa Delta Pi on the ISNU campus.

Discussing the formal initiation ceremony of new members with Miss Bernice Frey are Jeanne Charlton, Alice Weizsaecker, Suzanne Albright, Mr. Francis Belshe, Barbara Dunn, Lynn Eadie, and Muriel Rees.

Dr. T. E. Rine demonstrates the ancient Arabic abacus, a counting device, to Betsy Hosken, Linda Huber, Terry Glynn, and Marilyn Huber.

Kappa Mu Epsilon

A prize-winning Homecoming float bearing the slogan "Slide the Hurons to Infinity" was one of the projects carried on during the past year by Kappa Mu Epsilon, the national honorary mathematics fraternity, under the sponsorship of Dr. T. E. Rine. A review of the book One, Two, Three, Infinity by one of the members, a Christmas party organized by the pledges, and several interesting and informative talks by members of the mathematics department all added to the professional experiences enjoyed by members of this organization.

Kappa Omicron Phi

To further the best interests of home economics on the campus and to take part in campus activities is the objective of the national honorary home economics fraternity, Kappa Omicron Phi. Each month the organization under Miss Josephine Ross sponsored the cookie sales held on West Bridge; at Homecoming, Rambo House, the home management house, gave a tea; and the main project was the making of a backdrop curtain for the small gym. Marilyn Johnson, Joyce Bradford, Delores Aupperle, Elaine Lebegue, and Norma Elliott served as officers in 1956-57.

Officers of the Honorary Home Economics Fraternity are Joyce Bradford, Marilyn Johnson, Lila Junis, Norma Elliott, Delores Aupperle, and Norma White. Miss Josephine Ross is the sponsor.

Dave Holcomb, the director of the operetta "New Moon" meets with Janel Schweigert, Marilyn Kopp, Art Yergler, Shirley West, Ron Beer, Betty Lichty, and Dave Seymour to plan the production.

Lowell Mason Club

The March presentation of Sigmund Romberg's operetta "New Moon," which included such favorite songs as "Lover, Come Back to Me," and "Stout-Hearted Men," was the climax of many weeks of planning and rehearsal by the members of the Lowell Mason Club. These music enthusiasts, under the sponsorship of Mr. Perry Hackett, also presented a scholarship to a deserving upperclassman and decorated a Homecoming float, which showed a Pied Piper leading the Huron mice to slaughter. The decoration won second place honors in the annual contest.

Lutheran Club

A series of inexpensive suppers, a square dance, a Homecoming float, and a banquet held early in February were some of the projects undertaken by the Lutheran Club during the past year. A major event was the joint showing with the Bloomington-Normal Ministerial Association of the motion picture "Martin Luther." In following their objectives of promoting Christian worship and developing Christian fellowship, the group organized a series of campus vespers. Dr. Clarence Kurth and Dr. Vernon Pohlmann served as sponsors of the organization.

The Lutheran Club banquet is the topic under development for Richard McLaughlin, Willene Collman, Shirley Augsburger, Barbara Dowdle, Dr. Clarence Kurth, and Dr. Vernon Pohlmann.

Maize Grange

Once each spring and fall the university barn is used for something other than its usual purpose, because at this time the ISNU chapter of Maize Grange sponsors a square dance there. In addition to this main project, the organization, under the guidance of Dr. Clyde Hudelson, also enters a float in the Homecoming parade. This year members received an honorable mention with the theme "Drop on the Hurons." The purpose of the group is to elevate the American farmer through moral and spiritual idealism. Any student on campus may join.

Men's Physical Education Club

Under the guidance of sponsor Dr. Clifford E. Horton the Men's Physical Education Club, one of the newest organizations on campus, carried on an active program during the school year 1956-57. The first meeting of the year witnessed the election of officers: Ron Slack, president; Ron Riek, vice-president; Charles O'Dell, secretary; and Lester Brewer, treasurer. The meetings consisted of films and lectures on the various sports activities. During the next year, the group hopes to become a national organization and have a distinctive pin.

Seeking the approval of Chuck O'Dell, Lester Brewer, and Ron Riek, Ron Slack submits the year's program outline for the Men's Physical Education Club.

Pointing out the date of the spring dinner dance for members is Jerry Vankus while Ron Riek, Bob Jones, Mr. Carl Heldt, and Don Magee observe him.

“N” Club

The Homecoming spirit at ISNU shifts into high gear when the “N” Club announces the date of the Homecoming Queen election, which they sponsor. At the Homecoming game, the lettermen circulate selling refreshments, the proceeds from which are used to sponsor a special project later in the year. This group also plays host for the annual McLean County Basketball Tournament and sponsors a spring dinner dance for its members. Don Magee, Bob Jones, Jerry Meidel, and Jerry Vankus served as officers this year, and Mr. Carl Heldt was advisor.

NAACP

Joyce Miller, president; Andrew Purnell, vice-president; Sylvia Jones, secretary; and Ruth Keller, treasurer, led the NAACP during 1956-57 with the assistance of Dr. Keeley. In the fulfillment of their purpose to educate their membership and the public in citizenship and civil rights and to encourage the discontinuance of discrimination in places of public accommodations, the organization participated in the Homecoming festivities, sponsored a booth at the Spring Carnival, and engaged in a debate on the recent Supreme Court action.

Mr. Benjamin Keeley makes a suggestion regarding the plans for the next meeting. The response from Joyce Miller, Andrew Purnell, Ruth Keller, and Sylvia Jones seems agreeable.

"Does he need a second coat of paint?" Phyllis Spalenka, Dawn Silvers, and Hap Robarts ask the advice of Dr. Donald Ries as they make the Redbird, a part of their Homecoming decoration.

Naturalist Club

Spring and fall to the Naturalist mean exciting changes in the flora and fauna of the countryside. To observe these changes and to study interesting nature forms, the Naturalist Club takes two informative field trips around Illinois and neighboring states. The club members also participate actively indoors at the monthly meetings where nature lectures are presented by guest speakers. Guided by faculty advisor Dr. Donald Ries the Naturalist Club sponsors a year 'round program which provides many enjoyable hours for its members.

Newman Club

To provide for the spiritual welfare and guidance of Roman Catholic students in their faith was the objective carried forth by the Newman Club. The preparation of a float for the Homecoming parade, picnics in the spring and fall, the annual dance, this year named "One Down and One to Go," and interesting religious lectures given by visiting priests were only a few of the many activities carried on by the organization. Father John Ryan was the Chaplain and Mr. Willard McCarthy was the sponsor of the group during 1956-57.

Father John Ryan offers some advice to Barbara Rothan, Mr. Willard McCarthy, Marvin Elbert, Ken Berta, Dorothy Griswold, and Anne Wahrer in connection with the program planned for the next meeting.

Orchesis

Light of foot and heart, poised and graceful Orchesis members presented their annual spring concert, "A Century in Dance" as a tribute to the Centennial Year. These modern dancers gave excerpts from their concert at an assembly, presented a high school assembly tour, and sponsored master lessons in modern dance, this year given by the Jean Erdman and the Jose Limon Companies. Miss Miriam Gray was the sponsor of this organization, whose purpose it was to foster an appreciation and understanding of creative dance forms.

Physical Science Club

What is physical science? How is it taught? What are the latest technical developments in the field and how can they be used? These are just a few of the many questions Physical Science Club, which is open to all interested students, attempted to answer this year. Under the sponsorship of Dr. Esther Griffith, the organization, whose officers are Lou Schmitt, Gerald Stemke, Anne Gannon, and Ron Deason, also participated in several activities—a field trip, a Christmas party, and a hot chili supper in cold December.

Explaining the function of a vacuum tube to Gerald Stemke, Anne Gannon, Ron Deason, and Lou Schmitt is Dr. Esther Griffith.

Making sure that all of the necessary preparations have been taken to make the next meeting a success are Ken Janda, president; Robert Townsend, vice-president; David Pesavento, treasurer; and Mrs. Dorothy Brunk.

Pi Gamma Mu

The words "enthusiastic" and "continuous" best describe the year's activities for the national honorary social science fraternity. Keeping abreast of current events, the organization held a panel discussion on the elections of 1956. Later in the year, Mr. Rait Ahmad Zubi from Israel spoke on the Israel culture. Always anxious to understand all facets of a situation, members presented a debate on governmental intervention in conservation of natural resources at one of the monthly meetings. Mrs. Dorothy G. Brunk served as sponsor for Pi Gamma Mu.

Pi Kappa Delta

The 25th Annual Invitational Debate Tournament, which attracted twenty-seven colleges from ten different states, was the outstanding project of the year for the national forensics society, Pi Kappa Delta. The contest began late Friday afternoon and continued through Saturday noon, at which time a trophy presented by this fraternity was awarded to the school which had emerged victorious. Students who participate in debate and oratory are eligible for membership after they have successfully engaged in a stipulated number of tournaments.

In a more serious moment, Barbara Mowder, secretary; Peg Davenport, vice-president; Don McHenry, president; and Dr. Ralph Micken, sponsor, discuss an approaching debate tournament in which they will participate.

Looking over the minutes of the last meeting in preparation for the next are officers Ron Cook, Bob Gass, Marilyn Robinson, Joyce Miller, John Holloway, and Dr. R. W. Esworthy.

Pi Omega Pi

During the past year Pi Omega Pi, the national honorary business education fraternity, sent a representative to the joint convention of the National Business Teachers' Association and of Pi Omega Pi, which was held during Christmas vacation in Chicago. During the rest of the year, the society had guest speakers such as a representative from General Electric, who spoke to the group about job opportunities, and a grain broker from Bloomington. This organization also had a Christmas party and a joint meeting with the Business Education Club.

Science Club

Exploring the "nooks and crannies" of science through both informative speeches by experts and planned field trips to places of scientific interest such as the General Electric plant in Bloomington, the members of the Science Club broadened their knowledge. At the informal monthly meetings this year, participants had many chances to see award-winning science films on subjects ranging from protoplasm to higher electronics. The first honorary organization to be formed on campus is directed by both student and faculty members.

Abbie Ackerman shows Miss Dilks a circular she received from General Electric in connection with the field trip the organization planned. Gerald Stemke listens approvingly.

Admiring a woodcarving of fishermen which Miss Lela Winegarner brought from one of her trips to Norway are Anne Pahnke, Donald Behnke, and Marcia Lester, officers of Sigma Tau Delta.

Sigma Tau Delta

Books which date back one hundred years and those recently published are annually found for a price ranging anywhere from one cent to twenty-five cents at the Sigma Tau Delta book sale. In the spring, the honorary English society publishes the Triangle, a magazine containing the creative writing of university students. Composed of those English majors and minors who have an interest in creative writing, the fraternity also sponsors a Homecoming breakfast for alumni and a spring banquet. Miss Lela Winegarner was the sponsor of the group.

Social Science Club

Aside from claiming the distinction of being one of the largest clubs on campus, the Social Science Club sponsors the Homecoming parade and the floor show at the Spring Carnival. At the beginning of each semester, the club also plans a tea for the members. The February meeting was a lecture given by Professor Edward Buehrig from Indiana University on Woodrow Wilson's policies. Mr. Warren Harden served as advisor for the group and was assisted by officers Gene Anderson, Tom Hughes, Eleanor Mitchell, and Kent Schwirian.

Just before the large February meeting held in the Student Union ballroom, LaRae Muselman, Kent Schwirian, Eleanor Mitchell, Gene Anderson, Tom Hughes, and Mr. Warren Harden stop to discuss the order of business.

The Dutch Auction held at the last meeting recalls some amusing incidents to the minds of officers Muriel Rees, Marie Honnold, Rosie Nichols, Lynn Eadie, Ken Berta, and Joyce Sager.

Special Education Club

"Y" Night, a unique project carried on by the Special Education Club in co-operation with the YWCA, gave the club members the opportunity to work with handicapped children in sports such as swimming and basketball and in craft work. The group, with the aid of sponsors Miss Dolores Lauf and Mr. Ernest Olson, also presented a faculty take-off at their last meeting and organized a Dutch auction for which the members contributed their old clothes, hired a truck, and went to Bloomington where they auctioned the clothes off to raise money.

Student Council

Each year at ISNU, members of the various departments elect their own representative to the Student Council. Thus, this council, with the aid of its sponsor, Dr. Harold Gibson, is able to bring student opinion before the faculty and to influence increased understanding and cooperation between the two groups. Moreover, through such traditional activities as the Homecoming Bonfire and Pep Rally and the subsequent Red Feather Dance, the council provides opportunities for the student body to unite socially.

Student Union Council

To see that the facilities of the Student Union building are used to provide the greatest possible service to the student's cultural, recreational, and social interests, the Student Union Council, in their initial year, sponsored the unusual and successful Cabaret Dance in December. At Christmastime the council sponsored the first appearance of the tree lighting ceremony in front of the Union and originated an annual ping pong tournament. The Student Union Council was also in charge of the ceremonies connected with the dedication of the Union in May.

Theta Alpha Phi

Conversation at the monthly dinner meetings of Theta Alpha Phi usually centers around the problems involved in the production of a play. This discussion can be called a means to an end, for the spring play is traditionally sponsored by the honorary dramatic fraternity. This year, however, the society combined its efforts with those of the other university drama groups to produce the Centennial Pageant. The organization, sponsored by Miss Mabel Clare Allen, strives to advance good drama on ISNU's campus and to promote fellowship among students of drama.

Marcia Lester demonstrates an acting technique in a dramatic scene from Camille for the edification of Miss Mabel Clare Allen, Peg Davenport, and Ron Schultz.

Rod Hartnett relates to Bill Muehlhauser, John White, Richard McLaughlin, and Dean Richard Hulet the future plans and activities involving the University Club.

University Club

All ISNU men are automatically inducted into the ranks of the University Club. The two-fold purpose of this organization is to unify the men of ISNU and to act as a service organization sponsoring many activities for the welfare of the entire student body. The men sponsor the traditional Stunt Show, the Christmas Services, and the Sweetheart Dance. Together with Women's League, the U Club sponsors the Big Four Dances, Dad's Day, and Orientation Week activities. This year University Club had a new faculty advisor, Dean Richard Hulet.

Veterans' Organization

Veterans from all branches of the service are eligible for membership in the Veterans' Organization at ISNU. The group, whose purpose is to unify the veterans in the student body, supplied the color guard for the annual Homecoming parade. This organization, which meets only when something of interest to all members is pending, is governed by a board of directors which is led by John Ortwerth, chairman; John Trask, vice-chairman; Joan Kester, secretary; and Ron Cook, treasurer. Dr. Stanley K. Norton acted as advisor during 1956-57.

The members of the board of directors of the Veterans' Organization are J. Ortwerth, J. Kester, J. Trask, S. Norton, D. Hutchison, J. Henry, B. Jones, C. Johns, G. Kimball, R. Cook, and K. Olson.

President Bone Rings School Officially Launches Center

President Robert G. Bone officially opened ISNU's centennial year last Monday with the ringing of the bell from Old Main. Returning students also received a facsimile copy of the first Vidette, which was issued in 1888.

ISNU is swinging into full-time centennial activities and will play host to many state and national conferences during the year.

A few of the main events, according to Chris A. DeYoung, Centennial Executive Secretary, are the Centennial Ball on February 8, dedication of a Lincoln Memorial on February 12, and Founder's Day Activities on February 18.

During the month of March there will be a School Public Relations Conference, an exhibition of One Hundred Years of Painting and Orchestral presentation, "Century in Dance."

The month of April includes Centennial College Day, and a state convention of the Future Teachers of America.

Centennial Honors Day, the dedication of the Student Union, and a Centennial Pageant Drama will be held in May. June begins with University

Dancers View Future At Beaux Art Formal

The Art Club, which sponsors the Beaux Art Ball formal, has chosen the Crystal Ball as the theme of this dance. All decorations will be done in a futuristic fashion and costumes and/or masks. If they are worn, should follow the theme of a glimpse into the future.

The dance will be held Saturday, January 19, from 8:30 to 12:30 in the Student Union Ballroom. In addition to being the first formal to be held in the Student Union, the Beaux Art Ball also has the distinction of being the first formal of the Centennial year.

Music will be furnished by the Dreamtimers and there will be refreshments. The cost of admission is $1.75 per couple. It is requested by the Art Club that no flowers be worn to the dance.

A concert of 16th century music will be presented by ISNU music students and staff members at 3 p.m. Sunday in Capen Auditorium.

Members of a music history class taught by Dr. Irwin Spector, other student groups and members of the music faculty will participate in the program. Madrigals, vocal solos, choral numbers, and an instrumental group will be presented.

James Arner, senior from Bloomington, is in charge of arrangements. The program is open to the public without charge.

President Declines Invitation to Ball
President and Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower sent official regrets that they are unable to attend the Centennial Ball. The handwritten letter was received by the invitations committee earlier this week.

The Eisenhowers topped an invitations list which includes Governor and Mrs. William G. Stratton, other elected state officials, members of the Teachers College Board, and the Advisory Council of ISNU.

President Bone Rings School Officially Launches Center

President Robert G. Bone officially opened ISNU's centennial year last Monday with the ringing of the bell from Old Main. Returning students also received a facsimile copy of the first Vidette, which was issued in 1888.

ISNU is swinging into full-time centennial activities and will play host to many state and national conferences during the year.

A few of the main events, according to Chris A. DeYoung, Centennial Executive Secretary, are the Centennial Ball on February 8, dedication of a Lincoln Memorial on February 12, and Founder's Day Activities on February 18.

During the month of March there will be a School Public Relations Conference, an exhibition of One Hundred Years of Painting and Orchestral presentation, "Century in Dance."

The month of April includes Centennial College Day, and a state convention of the Future Teachers of America.

Centennial Honors Day, the dedication of the Student Union, and a Centennial Pageant Drama will be held in May. June begins with University

High School reunions, graduation class and leg of the start of Geography.

Dancers View Future At Beaux Art Formal

The Art Club, which sponsors the Beaux Art Ball formal, has chosen the Crystal Ball as the theme of this dance. All decorations will be done in a futuristic fashion and costumes and/or masks. If they are worn, should follow the theme of a glimpse into the future.

The dance will be held Saturday, January 19, from 8:30 to 12:30 in the Student Union Ballroom. In addition to being the first formal to be held in the Student Union, the Beaux Art Ball also has the distinction of being the first formal of the Centennial year.

Music will be furnished by the Dreamtimers and there will be refreshments. The cost of admission is $1.75 per couple. It is requested by the Art Club that no flowers be worn to the dance.

Directing the affairs of the various branches of Women's League to keep them co-ordinated is the function of Marilyn McKenna, June Crowell, Pauline Dombrosky, Nancy Seal, and the sponsor, Dean Anna L. Keaton.

Women's League

Carrying on an integrated program between all women's organizations on campus is Women's League, with Dean Anna L. Keaton as sponsor. The primary purposes of the league are to enable ISNU women to achieve a well-rounded social development and to extend helpful services to all women, on or off campus. Women's League sponsors the annual Spring Carnival and Dad's Day. The organization helps to initiate new students through its publication of the Campus Cues handbook and the sponsorship of the campus sister program.

Women's Physical Education Club

To further the best interest of physical education for women at ISNU is the purpose of the Women's Physical Education Club. Functions sponsored by this active club are the senior breakfast and the Victory Hall Christmas party, given in conjunction with the Elementary Club. Organizing the professional, social, and educational meetings are Barbara Phillips, president; Marilyn Matson, vice-president; Mary Lynn Brown, secretary; Ethel Mummert, treasurer; and sponsors Miss Gwen Smith and Miss Betty Keough.

Planning their entry for the Spring Stunt Show are the officers of the Women's Physical Education Club, Ethel Mummert, Mary Lynn Brown, Marilyn Matson, Miss Gwen Smith, Barbara Phillips, and Miss Betty Keough.

Front row: B. Kozloski, M. Miner, D. Acosta, M. Stewart, M. Monferdini, and M. Gunderson.
Back row: G. Dvorak, M. Matson, B. Phillips, S. Balzhiser, S. McCawley, G. Timm, C. Bremberg, F. Grebner, D. Mizerka, and J. Darby.

Women's Recreation Association

Included in their agenda of fun outside the classroom were such WRA activities as master lessons in field hockey and tennis. High school students from all sections of Illinois were instructed en masse in the mastery of badminton and modern dance techniques at the annual high school clinic. Early in February the group held a state-wide basketball sports day. In April delegates attended the National Convention at the University of Nebraska. Members rounded out the year with a banquet in May and an overnight camping trip at Lake Bloomington.

YWCA

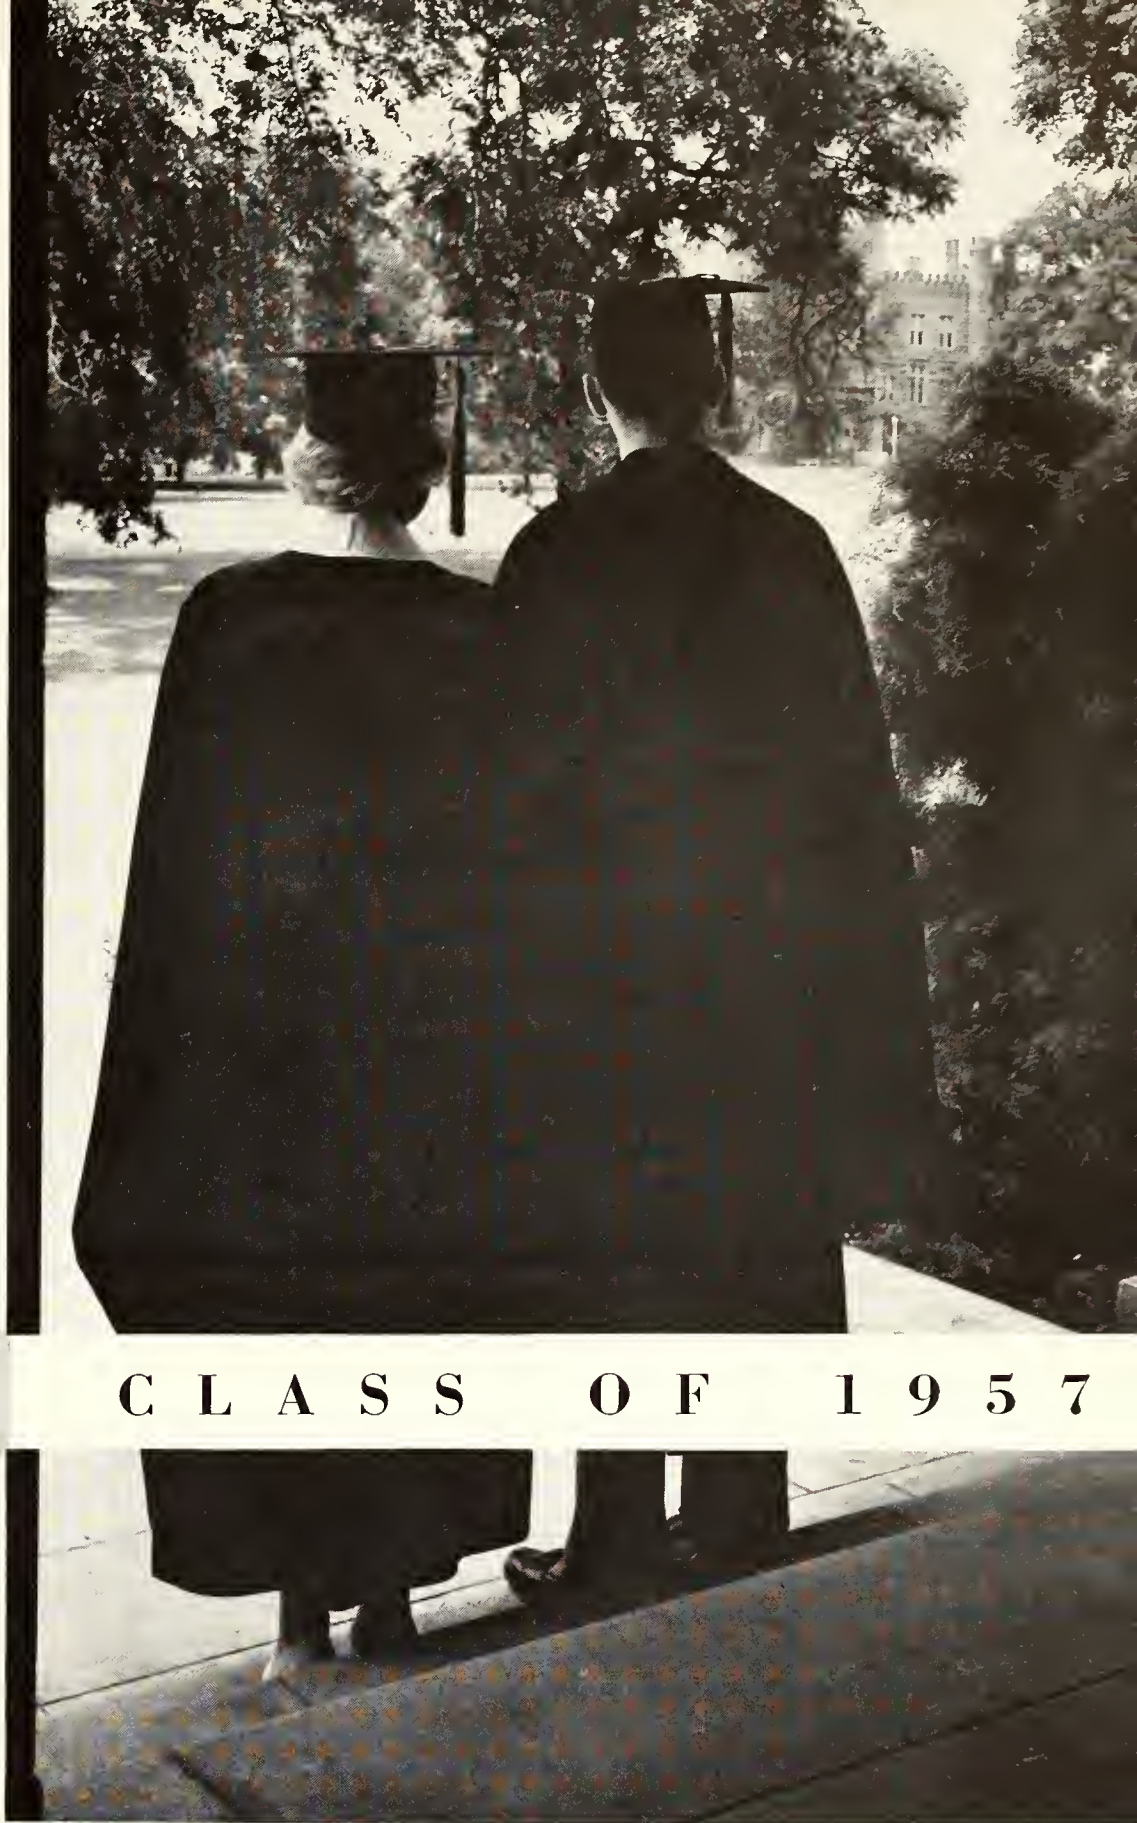

Of importance to the YWCA members was a Japanese cherry tree project which consisted of the raising of money to send to Japan for educational purposes and, in return, the receipt of a blossoming cherry tree for the campus. Weekend work camps, the selling of mums, and the redecoration of the White Room were also projects of the YWCA, which was first organized in 1872 by Lida Brown. This group, whose purpose it is to encourage fellowship among girls of all denominations, was sponsored by Mrs. Donald Kluge and Miss Thelma Lundgren.

Mary Plager reports the current balance in the cherry tree fund to Mrs. Kluge, sponsor; Marian Wright, treasurer; Wendy Downs, president; and Von Hayes, treasurer.

The

CENTENNIAL CLASS OF 1957

Two members of the graduating Centennial class pause on the steps of Milner Library, and, as they look over the campus, they reflect upon the past four years, which have brought many lasting friendships both in and out of the classroom.

Harmonizing the tradition of the old with the vigor of the new, the energetic class of 1957 has led the student body of ISNU with an impressive list of outstanding activities.

Ideas collectively recommended—and sometimes rejected— have made definite strides toward various agendas and programs which have won awards for the Centennial class. Individuals have their stock of honors also in the speech, journalistic, athletic, educational, and civic service fields.

Projecting themselves into the future with the eyes of the past and present, the members of the Centennial class resume The Processional March and take one more in a series of steps toward progress through teacher education.

Candid

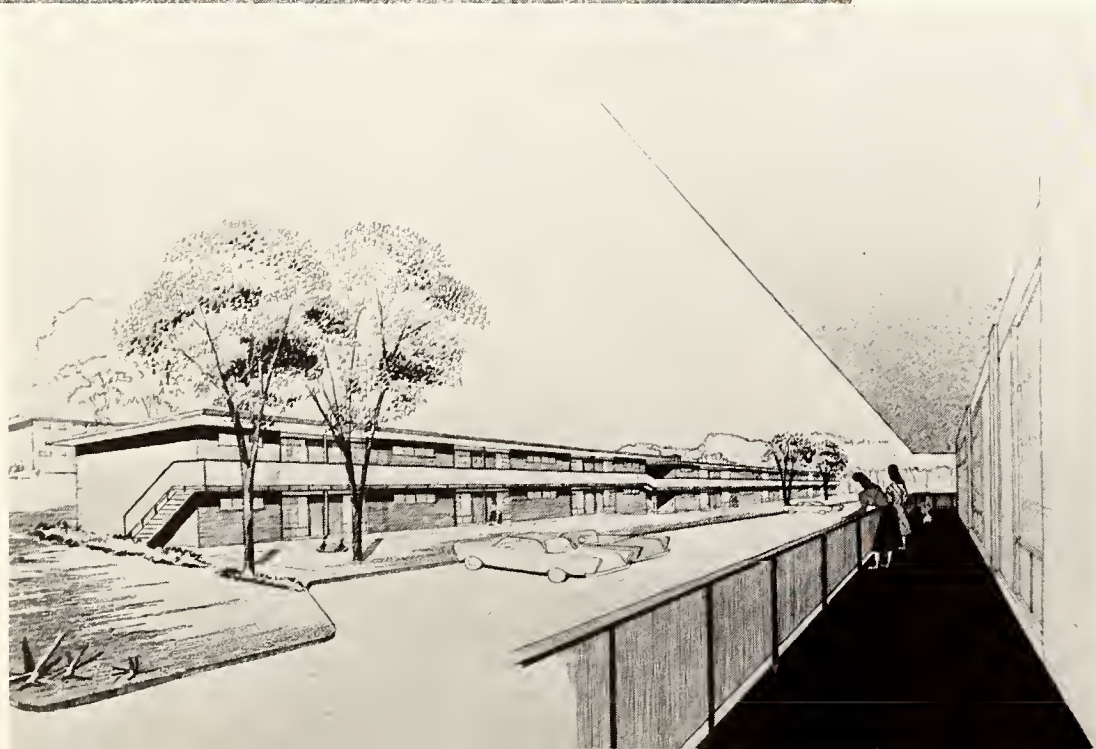

Blowing out the candles on the ISNU birthday cake are President Robert Bone and Jack Stoltz, the president of the Alumni Association.

President and Mrs. Robert Bone, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Cunningham, and Mr. and Mrs. John Felmley find posing for a typical "tin-type" picture quite fitting at the Centennial Ball.

Tom Olson, Marilyn Chronic, Erpel Garrett, and Jackie Laing agree that the lawn in front of the Science Building is the perfect place to discuss current school business.

Replacing the present Cardinal Court will be the married-student-housing project, shown in the architects' drawing.

Advisory Board

With three years down and only one to go, members of the Junior Class have had plenty of experience in planning, and so they assume full responsibility for the Junior-Senior Prom. The advisory board of twenty-four members together with the officers of the class and Sponsor T. E. Rine also plan the Homecoming float and the spring carnival booth. Two all-school dances sponsored by the Junior Class were held in the Student Union Ballroom. At Hallowe'en season, the "Witches' Wake" was held. All couples attending were clad in something black. In February, the class sponsored the "Hi-Fi Fling," a dance which followed a basketball game.

A Goal to Go

Junior Class Officers

President Bob Townsend discusses the Junior-Senior Prom plans with Vice-President Cliff Houghton, Secretary June Enos, and Treasurer Arlene Swanson.

Advisory Board

Returning to the campus for a second year of college life, the Sophomore class began the year by welcoming the new students with the "Frosh Fling," held in the new Student Union. The biggest project, "Two Different Worlds," this year's Sophomore Cotillion, required the concentrated effort of Co-chairmen Amy Moss and Leo Kiesewetter and the whole group. Class officers during the year were Bob O'Dell, Sharon Dean, Gloria Kaszynski, and Rachel Riggensbaeh, who were aided by the Class Advisory Board and counselled by the sponsor, Dr. Theodore Sands.

Suggested names for the annual cotillion are submitted by Bob O'Dell to Gloria Kaszynski, Rachel Riggensbaeh, and Sharon Dean.

Candid

Besides publications relating the events of the Centennial year, ISNU's birthday is celebrated by anniversary plate, bow tie, and license name plate.

At a tea in her honor, Miss Ann Bolton, coordinator from the U. S. Office of Education, offers interesting conversation to President Robert Bone, Dr. Chris DeYoung, Dean Anna Keaton, and foreign educators.

Miss Lela Winegarner enjoys conducting a class in English for some of the foreign educators from many different countries.

Master of Science Degrees are being conferred upon Edward J. Hoff, Mrs. Laura C. Norman, and Moses K. Weefer, the first African students to graduate from ISNU.

Preparing for a full year are Freshman Class officers, Russ Coen, vice-president; Bill Stimeling, president; Mr. Andreas Paloumpis, advisor; Diane Rothenberg, treasurer; and Sharon Reedy, secretary.

The Kick-off

Pushing off to a good start, the eager and not-so-green freshman class elected their officers and a 23-strong Advisory Council to lead them through the trials of the first year. The first project for the fledglings was a Christmas dance, the "Mistletoe Mixer," held in the Student Union Ballroom. Then the freshmen plunged wholeheartedly into the work of the Centennial Ball led by representatives Ron Hefler, Russ Coen, and Diane Rothenberg. In all, the Class of 1960 represented themselves well. Guided by class advisor Andreas Paloumpis, they made a fine addition to the campus of ISNU.

Departments . . .

Agriculture

Horticulture (the study of fruits, vegetables, and landscaping), animal husbandry (the study of care and management of animals), agronomy (the study of field crops, forage crops and soils), and agricultural engineering management constitute the program for the student in agriculture at ISNU. In addition to these specific courses, the major must complete several biology requirements such as bacteriology, botany, entomology, and often zoology. Several classes are held at the University Farm, a tract of land of approximately 150 acres, where students can do practical work during the course of their study transplanting slips, judging grain, or dairying. Important experimental work is conducted with the testing of feed losses for poultry, raising meat hogs and lard hogs, and using antibiotics with steers.

Dr. Clyde W. Hudelson,
Head of the Department of Agriculture.

Faculty and Staff . . .

One hundred years ago Illinois State Normal University was organized with a staff of two teachers, who instructed in general education. The student body consisted of nineteen students. Today, in 1957, ISNU has a teaching staff of approximately three hundred who teach in any one of the eighteen departments in the University. On campus there are eight hundred and eighty freshmen, six hundred sophomores, five hundred juniors, and five hundred and eighty seniors. The graduate school, which was begun in 1947, has an enrollment of sixty-nine students. During the past year, too, ISNU had the privilege of taking part in a foreign educators' program, which was directed by Dr. Chris DeYoung, who was assisted by Dr. Rose Buehler, Dr. Helen Nance, and Miss Lela Winegarner.

Besides presiding as teachers in the classroom, many members of the faculty serve in activities on and off the campus. Twenty-six members have written articles on subjects in their field for various publications during 1956. Dr. Helen Marshall of the Social Science Department compiled the history of ISNU, Grandest of Enterprises. On campus, twenty per cent of the faculty assist students by serving as sponsors or advisors for the various campus groups. Committees to assure the smooth functioning of the University and to further the education of future teachers also demand much of the time of the ISNU faculty.

Art

To enjoy art, we must study it in surroundings natural to us, theorizes Dr. F. Louis Hoover, head of the Art Department. The Student Union has provided just such a background for the aesthetic. Freshman majors displayed their talents in a non-objective art exhibition in the Union lounge last fall. Later on, dealing with the Centennial theme, a priceless art exhibition depicting one hundred years of painting was presented. The course of study for art majors and minors consists of the history of art, which traces art from pre-historic ages to World War I; the study of the reproduction of the human form; and the techniques of lettering and watercolor. Students who are not in the art curriculum may also participate in artistic endeavors by means of courses in sculpture, weaving, jewelry, and pottery.

Dr. F. Louis Hoover,
Head of the Department of Art.

Biological Science

Armed with a sparkling new dissecting set, the beginning biology student starts his career at Felmley Hall in a bout with a fetal pig. From this study he graduates to exploring the campus and identifying various campus trees. After these basic courses, the biology major enters into a further study of zoology, during which he becomes acquainted with animal life from the protozoans to the most complex vertebrates, and botany, a study extending from algae to the common flowering plants. Next, the student branches off into more specialized areas such as entomology, the study of insects; plant pathology, the study of plant diseases; plant physiology, the study of plant functions; bacteriology, the study of bacteria molds; and field zoology, which is the study of the Illinois fauna.

Business Education

Efficiency is a primary goal of students and teachers of Business Education. An excellent background for any business occupation is offered by this department, which is under the direction of Dr. Lewis R. Toll. The courses preparing students for these diverse vocations include shorthand, which ranges from the correct reading and writing techniques to an advanced shorthand that requires an adept development of transcribing ability and recording speed. Extensive training is also offered in accounting. These classes include the keeping of business records, the interpretation of financial statements, and the controlling of accounts. The majors and minors also find business economics and business finance important for their work. With such a varied program unusually versatile teachers are produced.

Head of the Department of Business Education.

Education and Psychology

During its first one hundred years of teacher training, ISNU has repeatedly emphasized the worth and dignity of the individual. The Department of Education and Psychology, headed by Dr. Chris A. De Young, strives to answer these questions: Who is the individual? How does he become what he is? By what criteria is he measured? Professional education courses are given to majors in elementary, junior high, and secondary education. In addition, graduate courses in Education and Psychology are offered to teachers, school administrators, and counselors. The psychological counseling service provides counseling for students in the University and provides training experiences for graduate students. The combination of these branches has formed one of the most beneficial departments on ISNU's campus.

Elementary Education

Members of the largest department on campus are guided in a wide variety of subject matter by their department head, Dr. Helen Nance. By means of a sequential program that is spread throughout the four years, the elementary major is gradually introduced to his profession. The group observations of the freshman year are followed in the second year with the opportunity to study an individual child for a nine-week period. In junior participation the elementary major spends a minimum of twenty hours in the classroom becoming familiar with the many experiences originating there. Educational techniques are again compared with those principles advocated in textbooks. Thus, when the elementary major reaches his senior year, he is prepared to assume the responsibilities of student teaching.

Director of the Division of Elementary Education.

English

Through English Composition and Introduction to Literature the Department of English reaches every student. For those persons majoring in English, a variety of courses in composition and in literature are offered. Beginning with Beowulf, the student becomes acquainted with the literature of the Middle English period, the Renaissance, the Romantic movement, the Victorian period, and the twentieth century. Courses in American literature cover the period from the colonization of this country to date, with emphasis on trends in thought. World Literature is the survey of the major foreign writings, including the literature of ancient Greece and current European writings. The student may also elect classes in creative writing, in editorial problems, and in the development of the English language.

Foreign Languages

Whether your problem lies in the translation of Parlez-vous Français or in the pronunciation of ¿ Hablan Uds. Espanol? Dr. Jennie A. Whitten's Foreign Language Department will willingly help you find the answer. While at the present time full curricula in French, Spanish, Latin, and German are offered, Dr. Whitten found, in a study of her department's history, that only Latin has been offered consistently each year during the past hundred years.

Students of the Foreign Language Department, in addition to attaining a mastery of one or more languages, learn to understand the people that speak these languages. Through studying the history and the geography of these peoples, ISNU linguists also appreciate the cultural oddities and unique contributions that characterize representative countries.

Geography

Wouldn't it be fascinating to compare the characteristics of the United States with those of twenty other countries? In June of 1957, thirty-five interested students and faculty will have that opportunity on the round-the-world Centennial trip sponsored by the Geography Department. Students and graduates will earn eight hours of college credit through participation and study. The department offers an understanding of our native land: a course in the geography of the United States, which is a survey of the major regions in terms of contemporary physical, cultural, and resource patterns. Standard courses cover phases of climate, topography, and geology. The Geography Department, under the direction of Dr. A. W. Watterson, also serves as an official weather station for the surrounding area.

Home Economics

Nutrition, Dietetics, Costume Design, and Home Management are just a few of the many interesting courses offered to Home Economics majors and minors. For nine weeks the girls reside in the Rambo Home Management House for the purpose of instruction in all of the phases of homemaking responsibilities such as preparing, planning, and serving meals. They learn the duties of house-keeping and other social and managerial problems related to the home. The girls also may take other useful courses in this field such as Foreign Cookery, Marriage and the Family, Family Health and Home Nursing, and Clothing. In order to be certificated vocationally, all Home Economics majors take their student teaching off-campus for nine weeks in addition to the nine-week period spent at the Home Management House.

Industrial Arts

Amid the buzzing of an electric saw, the grinding of sandpaper, and the rhythmic hammering of a nail, the students of the Industrial Arts Department make such articles as jewelry boxes, cabinets, and wrought iron book stands or tables. Student projects include the drawing of blueprints, the preparation of personalized stationery, and the construction of small motors and radios. The categories of crafts, drafting, electricity, metal working, printing, and woodworking all make up the curriculum and also serve to keep the majors and minors busy. Industrial Arts students are required to take one course in each of the six fields and have eight hours in at least three areas before they graduate. Dr. Ray M. Stombaugh, head of the department, works with the men in preparation for their teaching careers.

Library Science

Library Science, one of the youngest departments at ISNU, was started in the summer of 1939 to meet the demands of elementary and secondary school administrators for teachers with some training in library work. "The Library As an Information Center" was the first course offered; the present program consists of ten courses. Through this library program, students training to be school librarians become acquainted with literature for all age groups and with the processing of library materials. School administrators and teachers are helped through this program to find library materials and books of value to their students and to learn the place of the library in the school program. Miss Eleanor Welch, director of the Milner, Metcalf, Special Education, and University High School Libraries, is the head of this department.

Mathematics

The Department of Mathematics, under the direction of Dr. Clyde T. McCormick, offers a flexible program to meet the needs and interests of both majors and minors in the field. Offerings include professional courses and arithmetic courses for elementary majors, as well as the most modern courses in algebra, geometry, analysis, and statistics. The mathematics student begins his college career with courses in algebra and plane geometry. He then progresses to more advanced courses in differential equations, theory of equations, and problems in applied mathematics. The department also offers interesting studies in the use of the slide rule, the angle mirror, alidade, and abacus. Electives in the history of mathematics and techniques of presentation help to prepare the students for careers in teaching.

Men's Health and Physical Education

Professional preparation of coaches in football, baseball, basketball, and track, plus courses in the care and treatment of athletic injuries help to prepare the majors and minors in physical education to become experts in their field. Instructors strive to develop students' physical and mental abilities through the courses in the field of health and physical education. This department trains teachers in many aspects of physical education such as recreational activities and counseling. The important duties of coaching and officiating at athletic events are given special attention during the junior and senior years. Opportunity is provided to demonstrate individual skill and proficiency as well as team spirit during special departmental activities.

Music

Quite a change has taken place in the music department since the years prior to 1900 when only occasional courses were offered in this division. The gradual climb revolves around two faculty department heads: Mr. F. W. Westhoff, who was employed to teach music in both the University and the training school from 1901 to 1936, and Dr. Emma Knudson, who replaced Mr. Westhoff and who is the present department head. Today the department can boast of various areas of music education on both the graduate and undergraduate level, excellent equipment and materials, and seven major organizations. During each Christmas season, the combined University Choir, Men's Glee Club, and Women's Chorus present Handel's "Messiah." All are looking forward to new headquarters in the new art-music-speech building.

Physical Science

The strong smell of alcohol, chemical equations, test tubes, and Bunsen burners are some of the materials a Physical Science major must come in contact with in his chosen field. The Physical Science Department acquaints the future teacher with a thorough knowledge of the fields of science and their importance in the modern world. Besides general courses in physics and chemistry, the student of Physical Science may take courses in electricity, thermodynamics, aeronautics, qualitative and quantitative analysis, and photography. Most of the courses provide a laboratory period for experimentation and study. In one course the student has an opportunity to visit industries and observe first hand the practical application of science. Dr. Ralph U. Gooding is head of the Physical Science Department.

Social Science

Do you know the major events which have occurred in ISNU's 100 years of progress? The Social Science Department can give you these answers. The various instructors in this department trace civilization and cultural anthropology from the beginning of civilization, through the days of the Greeks and the Romans, and down to the present dynamic rivalries between the free and the Communist spheres. The department has brought to the campus such noted figures as Senator Estes Kefauver, who lectured on current political events. Everyone on campus comes in contact with this department before graduation, because all students are required to take fifteen hours of social science courses such as Contemporary Civilization, History of Civilization, and American History.

Speech

Directing a play, painting scenery, applying makeup, preparing a radio script, learning the controls in a radio booth, debating the merits of foreign aid, and other activities of this nature occupy the in-class and out-of-class time of a speech major or minor. Dr. F. L. D. Holmes, the head of the department, guides his students through the arts of public speaking, oral interpretation, and drama, and gives them a thorough command of the English language and the phonetic alphabet. These students also attain a scientific understanding of the physiological and psychological aspects of voice. The Speech Department reaches all of the students on campus through the required sophomore course in speech, the junior speech check, and extra-curricular activities such as plays, debates, and radio programs.

Special Education

In brightly sunlit rooms with mirror-panelled doors are special classes for the exceptional child. In these attractive classrooms with green writing boards, small spinet pianos, and little brown desks, the mentally retarded, physically handicapped, partially sighted and blind, hard of hearing and deaf, speech defective and socially maladjusted children receive special education. The students who are specializing in one of the six fields work with children from kindergarten through the eighth grade. This area is a complete unit within itself with its psychological counseling service, speech clinic, hearing and reading laboratory, library, music room, and classrooms. The Special Education Department in Fairchild Hall and its supervisor, Dr. Rose Parker, are well-known throughout the United States.

Dr. Rose Parker,
Director of the Division of Special Education.

Women's Health and Physical Education

Tooting whistles, swishing racquets, and women clad in white sport clothes create a scene of vim, vigor, and vitality within the area of the Women's Physical Education Department. Courses in this multi-sports program—beginning and advanced tennis, badminton, archery, volleyball, soccer, golf, field hockey, and basketball—provide Dr. Esther French's girls with a sufficient background in individual and team activities. With a "swing your partner to and fro!" the folk and social groups move into square formation to develop the skills of folk dances. Folk and social dance, dance for the elementary school, and elements of modern dance are included in the dance section. To help the girls attain additional ease and grace there are classes in swimming and diving and in advanced swimming.

Head of the Department of Health and Physical Education for Women.

The Second Century

yesterday . . . today . . .

The past has been presented; now the future of Illinois State Normal University is to be visualized. Only time will reveal which present-day hopes and dreams will materialize. The realization of some of these is almost certain, for many of the aspirations of the founding fathers and their successors have surely been fulfilled.

Preparing teachers for public schools, which have nearly doubled their pupil enrollment in the last decade, is indeed a challenge. Although partially overcome, the challenge remains. The blend of intellectual advancement and character growth is a constant aim of ISNU. The growing needs will be met and the aims achieved by the professional and cultural education provided at this century-old University campus. As improved quality replaces the quantity of required courses, the ultimate goal of a liberal education will be achieved.

Potential developments in the future education system will include an enlarged liberal-arts or general education program, thereby preparing graduates whose professional background has been enhanced by work leading to a realization of society's needs. The teacher training curriculum which is currently offered will be improved by this broader teacher education concept. Competitive professions point toward the possible need for extending college experiences—of providing a five-year educational program for the degree of Bachelor of Science, more functional student teaching activity, a probationary period of internship, and practical and oral examination. Increased professional growth will indeed occur. College entrants will find a challenge in the more selective requirements for admittance to the University. Assistance in professional screening for ISNU will be given by secondary schools across the state by high-school programs of teacher assistants, pre-teaching courses, and an enlarged professional organization. Soon to become a reality is the growth of F.T.A. into a Future Teachers International, a preliminary for serving youth abroad.

Social barriers will become extinct as integration of students continues. Into the profession of college instructors will come local and overseas personnel working side by side. The exchange of knowledge will continue to decrease the ever-shrinking cultural differences. Tomorrow—a more creative, intelligent society will materialize through increase of effective education across the ISNU campus.

As the years of the second century evolve, unlimited physical changes, directed toward enlargement of classroom facilities and improved accommodations for athletic activities, will become an actuality. An indication of realism is seen in this Centennial Year by the erection and dedication of Schroeder Hall, a classroom building designed by architects with an eye to the future. Cardinal Court, present temporary housing units for single and married students, will be replaced by extensive physical education quarters. It is hoped that situated beneath a modern stadium will be a central unit of a gymnasium, a swimming pool, and training rooms to provide for a more effective men's P.E. department. These tangible improvements will alleviate some of the crowded conditions of McCormick Gymnasium, which will someday be devoted solely to the activities of women.

Most prominent in the minds of the University's leaders is laboratory school expansion, which has partially been secured by the erection of the new Metcalf School, attached to the north side of Fairchild Hall. It is anticipated that a modern University High will be a reality within the next five years, enlarging the facilities for student teachers on campus. The heating plant will be improved and eventually replaced with a more effective system.

The campus area will expand, to bring upon itself new residence halls for women and men and an arts building for music, art, and speech.

The extension of the campus, through a purchase of land adjoining the original campus site, is a dream of the future. Expansion means improvement; enlarged facilities mean an enlarged student body. Few persons realize the potentialities inherent in the next decade of teacher education; succeeding years in the development of Illinois State remain even more intangible.

With an optimistic outlook, ISNU proceeds into the challenging future, preparing for its second century with great anticipation of a vision yet unseen.
